Local Matters.

SATURDAY, May 27, 1882.

DeHazen, the barber, has moved into the Newell block.

Rev. J. Sunderland will occupy the Baptist pulpit to-morrow.

Mrs. Fred Cutler has superb ice cream rooms in Laiable block above the billiard rooms.

Every Good Templar is requested to attend the meeting Monday evening. Social this evening.

Our readers will see by an ad in another column that O. E. Thompson has added a new list of agricultural implements.

Barnum & Earl's advertisement slid out on account of imperfection of cut. His store and nice goods fresh and fair are still there, call and see, new ads next week.

L. DAVIS, Sect.

Prof. Daniel Putnam of the Normal will address our Temperance meeting at the W. C. T. U. hall to morrow afternoon at 3. P. M.

The death of the Rev. Dr. Park Donaldson occurred in the very room in which he was marrried thirty years before. He married the daughter of Judge Dexter.

In the list of Deputy Marshals last week that efficient officer Mr. Geo. Jackson was over looked. Law breakers can shake in their boots just the same.

The last important case of Judge Beakes was Moses Taylor vs. Ypsilanti to which he gave his untiring energies and probably hastened his death.

Ed. Thompson just beats the natives in artistic business designs. Just drop into his sketching and drawing Sanctum, over O. E. Thompsom's famous agricultural store and see.

The Third Quarterly Meeting for this Conference year will take place at the Methodist church next Sabbath. The love feast will be held at 9 o'clock, A. M. Rev. Mr. Washburn, presiding elder, will preach in the evening.

TEA PARTY.—At the rooms of the W. C. T. U., Tuesday May 30th. Tea served from 6 to 8 o'clock, after which the young people will enjoy themselves blowing soap bubbles. An earnest invitation is extended to all. Admission five cents. Supper ten cents.

Our thanks are due Mr. M. G. Wood for a couple of specimens of tea, Figee Chap, and Oolong tea, of delicious taste and fragrance for which the very best and purest teas are noted. Mr. Wood is travelling salesman, with Lowe Bros., & Co. Tea importers and wholesale grocers, Detroit.

We are informed that the lack of a quorum in the Council Monday night was designed in order to postpone action on the bond question. Men and bretheren, are you not making a mistake? Is it wise to incur an additional $300. per month when you can save it to the city?

R. H. Crane, recently of Nebraska, who has been perfectly blind for a year past, will lecture at the M. E. church at Dixboro, in the M. E. church on next Monday evening, the 20th inst. Subject, "What a Blind Man saw in the West." Upon the same subject in the Free Church in Superior, Tuesday evening.

Eight per cent on ninety thousand dollars is seven thousand two hundred dollars per annum or six hundred dollars per month. If our Railroad indebtedness can be funded at four per cent the city will save three hundred dollars per month. Gentlemen of the Common Council the sooner you can stop that leak of three hundred dollars per month the better our tax payers will like it.

Many poor people and other's are paying seven per cent on their homes or in business. It will save such parties three per cent, besides staving off the presure upon them to issue bonds at 4 per eent on or before twenty years. Besides we can see no reason why the parties who shall be here years hence should not pay part of the price when the boom shall set in and real estate double in value as it surely will.

The Donavin Tenneseeans gave a most excellent concert on Monday evening. The audience was delighted, and many unite in pronouncing it the best entertainment of the kind ever given in this city. The peculiar feature of the concert was the rendering of the songs of the colored people of the south, which is pronounced to be entirely true to nature by those who have lived among them.

The funeral of Judge Beakes was held at Ann Arbor on Saturday afternoon, Rev. Dr. Hall officiating. The pall-bearers were ex-Gov. Felch, E. W. Morgan, President Angell, Judge Cooley, C. H. Richmond, E. B. Pond, E. D. Kinne, R. E. Frazer, Prof. Du Pont, T. F. Hill. The members of the Washtenaw County Bar attended the funeral in a body. Don M. Dickinson, Wm. P. Wells and Sullivan M. Cutcheon, of Detroit, and ex-Gov. Blair, of Jackson, were also present.

SAD.—Mr. Lewis Smith whose death is alluded to in our Ypsilanti correspondence was killed on the Bay City road near Orion while temporally acting as brakesman. This is the third death that has occurred on account of a low bridge. Mr. S. belonged on the Central and was reluctant to act even temporally on this road. He was 25 years old, left a wife and three children. He was residing at the Grand Trunk. His father was killed by lightning about two years ago. Rev. Mr. Elwood conducted the funeral exercises.

At a bar meeting at Ann Arbor Judge Joslin said: "I have known Judge Beakes for thirty one years. I have been with him and against him. I have had him before me in the probate court and have ever found him an affable and able lawyer, true to his clients, true to himself, true to the court, true to his family relations and true to the society in which he lived. And I know that in whatever bourne he may now have his home he may have the satisfaction of truthfully saying, While I was in the earth-world, I was a man."

To-Night,—At Land League Hall Ice cream and cake social. Turn out.

The king seed raiser in Mich. is Col. Childs of this city. So think D. M. Ferry & Co.

Next Tuesday decoration day, the post-office will be closed from 12 a. m. to 5 p. m. and then open one hour.

How many ladies will be on hand at A. Williams & Co. at 6 A. M. Monday to secure that silk dress?

The Mission Circle will have a dime social next Wednesday evening at Mrs. I. N. Weeds on Normal street.

Mr. A. Guild has sold out to Frank Barton. Frank proposes by close attention to business to make some money.

John M. Gregory, ex-superintendent of public instruction of Michigan, will deliver the commencement address at the University on June 29.

Terns the saloon man over the river, upon complaint of Watson Snyder being arrested for keeping his saloon open on Sunday, confessed judgement and paid $25.00 fine.

Mr. J. Randolph & Son have sold to Mr. Forester their partner and leave next week to become residents of Flint. Mr. Randolph is a down right temperance man, and he says "my infiuence shall be felt in that direction at Flint."

Ann Arbor parties, Chas. H. Cooley and Theodore Chapin had a narrow escape from a Hotel at Leadville in which they were lodging and consumed by fire. They lost their valises, escaping by the help of the firemen from upper window.

Mr. Samuel Linden and wife from Plymoth were driving over the railroad bridge Wednesday, when the horse took fright and ran away. Mrs. Linden was quite seriously hurt, her shoulder being dislocated. Mr. Linden was badly shaken up. Mr. L. is the great cattle dealer of Wayne county. Dr. Bonsteel was summoned.

ON THE BOOM.—There is quite a large influx of people coming into our city this spring. Every rentable house is snatched up. Property is on the boom. Never can property be bought again in this city as low as now, and the investor of real estate at present prices is as sure to realize from 25 to 50 per cent on his purchace as tomorrow's sun is to rise.

Gen. Clark writes the Register that, in his opinion, the covering of the streets with gravel year after year does much more harm than good. He says: 'After it has been used for a week or two it is ground to fine dust by the wheels passing over it. Then when there is a fresh wind the air is full of this nasty dust and the lungs of every one on the street is filled with it. If the streets were scraped of the mud till they were brought down to the proper grade, money enough may be saved to commence paving and then we should not see expensive blocks set up so high that the owners are obliged to put dangerous break neck places in the sidewalks.'

A GOOD PLACE TO LIVE IN. If the Episcopalians shall be able to secure a man equal to the veteran pastor of 35 years, with Rev. Mr. Sunderland in the Baptist pulpit, Rev. Father DeBever, Catholic; Rev. Mr. Grannis, Congregational; Rev. Mr. Elwood, Methodist; Rev. Dr. McCorkle, Presbyterian, the pulpits of this city will be abler manned than in any other city outside of Detroit in the State. The colored churches, Rev. Mr. Thompson of the A. M. E. and Brownell of the Second Baptist are equally well manned. There can be no excuse for soul destroying absenteeism from the house of God, or for unsaved souls in our beautiful city. It develops a moral power that makes Ypsilanti a welcome home for people loving morality, culture and refinement. We need not say that our educational facilities are well up to the moral power, a good place to bring up a family.

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOUSE OF WORSHIP.

We have seen the outline of the new Congregational church. It presents a handsome appearance. We like the exterior view very much. The roof is to be built with hammer beam trusses, and all the timbers exposed in their natural state. The ceiling can be simply varnished or painted blue. We would not build a church under any consideration with a flat or other upper ceiling. It is to be a brick building. Terra cotta and black brick decorations will contribute to beautify the exterior, and gratify a cultured taste. 86 feet to the top of the tower will not be very far toward heaven. But the money laid out in conveniences in the way of pastor's study, lecture and Sunday school rooms, in interior and exterior ornamentations that please the eye and through the eye the mind and heart fully compensates. The church will seat in the neighborhood of 500. The structure will cost not far from $5,000. Martin and Batwell, our enterprising and growing architects drew the plan. The plan for Mr. Cornwell's superb palatial edifice now building was drawn by the same parties.

CHILDREN.

There is altogether too much truth in the following from the Sentinel:

If one were to see parents, dealing out little drams, or the daily slings of tippling fathers to the little children, he would start with alarm, and protest against thus planting the sure seeds of intemperance, in the youthful appetite.

But no one seems to be alarmed, at the universal, and equally dangerous habit, of planting the seeds of vanity, frivolity, idleness, mental dissipation, and self-indulgence in youthful minds, If any parent wishes to know how far this evil has gone, he need only look at the children about him, or his own. The modes of bringing up children, religious modes included, are such as to create in them nothing but a constant craving for the stimulants of outward amusement, and excitement. A constant run of juvenile parties, plays, tableaux, festivals, excursions, &., form and fix in the growing mind the appetite, for the Opera the Theatre, the Beer garden, and every nameable species of dissipation and distraction. As children are brought up, it is not surprising that the moral character of so many people is "a howling wilderness."

Moses Taylor who held the railroad bonds against this city is dead. For a half century he was the leading merchant and banker in N. Y. The plaintiff in the suit and the defendent's attorney died within a few days of each other.

DECORATION DAY.

The Normal is equal to the occasion every time. Professors Vroman and George are leading the van in a celebration, Tuesday at half past two P. M. The procession will form at the Baptist church and proceed to the graves of the dead, who died that their country might live. Exercises and speeches appropriate to the day and occasion.

THE HEAVENS.

ED. COMMERCIAL:—The planet Mercury, which is not often seen by the naked eye, is now visible in the western sky, and is fast nearing Venus. On the 30th of the present month, the planets will almost be in conjunction, less than two degrees apart. Snch a sight has rarely been witnessed by the present generation. Mercury now is a litle below venus. The new comet, which interests so many, has entered the constellation of Cassiopeia, and an hour before midnight is almost mid-way from the horizon to the pole star. The writer saw the comet with the naked eye last Monday and Tuesday evenings. With a good telescope, it is a magnificent sight and one which I lately enjoyed for an hour.

JOHN TAYLOR.

NOT ASHAMED. STALWART PREACHING.

Sunday morning Rev. Mr. Elwood, pastor of the M. E. Church, showed himself a stalwart in the practical evangelical truths of the Bible. Text Paul's declaration "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ." In describing the characteristics of the great apostle to the Gentiles, his learning, eloquence, schollarship and statesmanship equal to any position in church or state, Mr. Elwood was himself eloquent and impressive. Possessing these superior qualifications fitting him for the most exalted position. Paul was not ashamed of the cross, and to preach the gospel on Mars Hill, to the cultured Athenians, the Commercial Corrinthians or to the out cast freedman at Rome. The Stalwart christianity came in when graphically showing the hatred of the world to a pure and undefiled gospel. The world looks on with leniency, complacency is the word upon christtan men and churches who represent a nominal christianity, one that bends to the world's maxims. But a christianity that by its purity, its strict adherance to gospel teaching, condemns and reproves the world, that goes straight at and has no sort of fellowship with worldly policies it hates, ever has and ever will until the last sinner is gathered in and saved. It is easy to float down stream and be indulgent to worldly methods. But to live a stalwart christian life, and to preach a stalwart gospel, the veritable truth as it is in Jesus, is the strongest possible test of genuine grace in the heart and of a triumphant faith. In our judgment such preaching must legitimately raise up a stalwart membership, a church that will dare to face the devil in every phase he may present himself.

MUSIC HATH POWERS TO CHARM THE SOUL.

We do not know when we have spent a more pleasurable hour than on Thursday morning at the Seminary. We found Superintendent Putnam dilligently on duty. Our wish made known to hear the songsters in Prof. Foote's department, we were placed under the direction of this famous teacher. First, we spent a few minutes in Mrs. Dunham's room, infant class. Prof. Foote developed here his rare faculty of securing the attention, interesting and effectually training the very young. Here is laid a solid foundation in music. Just a slight tap, with millitary precission and promptness the little folks take the successive steps; place their books one side, take slate and pencil, draw the necessary lines and signs, and sing. Woe to the Professor if he make the slightest departure in reading the music or singing; they trip him up instantly. The next grade was Miss Emma Barr's room. The process was the same only the music placed on the blackboard instead of slates. Miss Barr is a superior musician and conducted a part of the exercises. For lack of time, skipping the other grades, we went to the High school department. The large recitation room was full, and here was seen the result of a year's dicipline. The pupils in this room had to begin where the infant class did and go through the innitiatory processes. The future classes, who shall have had instruction in the previous grades, may show more perfection; but when it comes to singing with all the might and the understanding, downright enthusiasm, imparting to the listener soul inspiration, we do not believe any class can excel this one. The thought came to us that the Commercial's strenuous plea for the appointment of Prof. Foote to this position was more than justified. He is doing admirable work. The salary paid returns four fold. We do not believe there is a parent in the city who would not hold up both hands for retaining Prof. Foote. The inspiration in this department must be catching in all the other departments. At all events we came away with renewed zeal in our own work. Try it on parents.

In the afternoon we attended the rhetorical exercises in Prof. Carman's department. This is a valuable feature. we shall have to book it up when we have more space and time.

POLITICAL.

Senator Thurman has just informed a Louisville reporter that he believed that the Democrats had enough votes to elect a man to the Presidency in 1884. Mr. Thurman, like the man who took a fifth wife after being divorced from four termagants, is "a fine example of faith triumphing over experience."

Vermont is a small state, but it believes in large conventions. The delegates to the convention to nominate a candidate to what is now known as the West Side Congressional District will number 342—about half as many men as it took to nominate a President in the last Republican National Convention.

The Bay City Tribune says: The Democrats in congress are still opposing by every means the bill for the extension of national bank charters, going to the length of fillibustering to prevent consideration. They prefer to imperil the business interests of the country and precipitate a panic, if by so doing they may gain a political advantage. They know they are powerless to change the banking system or prevent the banks reorganizing under the statutes, but perceiving that the process will disarrange business and produce temporary financial embarrassment, they avail themselves of the opportunity of promoting it, for the hope that the disorder produced will benefit their party. They believe hard times would make converts for the Democracy and are wilfully striving to precipitate a panic. They are sweet patriots.

The thanks of the entire country are due Hon. J. C. Burrows for his able address before Congress in favor of the bill to protect innocent purchasers of patented articles. Many more examples of grossly unjust extortions of money from innocent purchasers might easily be added to those given. In the debate in the House pending the passage of this bill Mr. Burrows said:

MR. SPEAKER.—The brief time allowed for debate upon this motion to suspend the rules and pass this bill is wholly inadequate to permit a recital of the outrages which this measure is intended to remedy, much less to reply to the numerous criticisms urged against it. This is the second effort to bring this matter to the deliberate consideration of this house, and it is a little remarkable that, whenever it is sought to give protection to the innocent purchasers and users of patented articles, there are always some gentlemen to be found prolific of objections, to prevent, if possible, the passage of any measure for relief. Another peculiarity is that these same gentlemen have no suggestions to make by which their objections may be overcome. They simply abound in criticisms.

Even now, when certain modifications are proposed by the friends of the measure, to avoid antagonisms and make it conform, if possible, to the views of its opponents, even that is objected to, and the conclusion is forced upon us that it is the purpose to prevent, if possible, all legislation upon this subject. Now, sir, what I desire, what the people of the state which I have the honor in part to represent demand, what the farmers of this whole country insist upon, is that the purchasers of a patented article in good faith for a full consideration, and in the open market, shall be protected from the bands of patent-right inquisitors which infest the country and plunder our people? I demand for the purchaser in good faith of the barbed-wire fence, the drive-well, the Birdsell clover-huller, and the hundred other articles necessary to the farmers of the great west, that they shall be exempt from the unjust persecutions to which they are now subjected. I ask to embody in my remarks some well-authenticated instances of outrages to which the people of my district and state have been subjected.

S. L. Bently of Eaton Rapids reported that on the Birdsell clover-huller the following persons in that vicinity paid royalty on a huller valued at $450: W. S. Smith, W. H. Ford, J. Horner, Delos Smith and James Rorabeck—the fee demanded and paid being $100 by each.

On circular saw guide, valued at $50, $50 was demanded of R. Perrin, and $45 was paid. From H. Griffith and J. M. Allyn the same amount was demanded and the same paid. From Fred Spicer $50 was demanded and the case litigated, and a judgment of $91 50 rendered with costs.

For circular saw-dogs with attachments, valued at $75, from Fred Spicer $50 was demanded and $40 paid. The same demand was made of J. M. Allyn and H. Griffith for the same device, and same payment made.

W. A. Luman of Elsie writes that on a Glen & Hall clover thresher, valued at $260 when new, nine years after purchase a royalty of $125 was demanded, which, with the expense of 200 miles' travel and attorney fee, he paid. He also reports that Mr. W. H. Davidson, for a Wooster huller valued at $280, a royalty of $125 was demanded and judgment obtained. George Davidson had the same experience. J. Buesenger, A. E. Rockold, M. S. Hamilton and E. Thompson each paid the $125 royalty demanded for using a Glen & Hall clover-huller. B. B. Davis of Fowlerville reports that from Oscar D. Weller, on a clover-huller valued at $400, a royalty of $100 was demanded and paid. From J. R. Dait & Co., for use of head block valued at $125, a royalty of $100 was demanded. It remains unsettled. David Connell reports that Jeremiah Ramsey of Monterey used a cider-strainer made by himself, on which he paid a royalty to one J. D. Hampton of Detroit of $20. Henry Hawley of Burr Oak reports that from Wm. W. Teal for using several cider-press racks, valued at $12, that to his certain knowledge had been in use 30 years, one dollar for each ten was paid as royalty to avoid litigation. A much larger sum was demanded.

J. M. Failing of Tekonsha, got an old Birdsell huller in a trade, calling it worth $100; never run it an hour; was sued for infringement, and refusing to pay the royalty of $100 demanded, learned at a cost of $417 that the United States district court for the eastern district of Michigan knew more of the value of a patent than he did, and we came very near adding the disrespectful remark—less of equity. Jacob Willett of Ingham county was made to pay a royalty of $200 on the guide and arbor of a saw bought five years before, and valued at $75. Isaac S. P. Pound paid John C. Birdsell $100 for infringement of patent on clover-huller bought by him in 1871. From Henry Kline of Nottawa, $100 royalty was demanded and paid on account of use of clover-huller.

From Joseph Dean of Colon, for clover-huller, a royalty of $100 was demanded and $50 paid. The case of Mr. Dean was one of peculiar hardship. After using the machine long enough to earn $40, his arm was caught in the machinery and he was crippled for life. Selling the machine afterward, the purchaser was sued for royalty, and at the end of a suit found that his education in patent law had cost him $500. In behalf of Mr. Birdsell or his agent it should not be forgotten that on account of the poverty and crippled condition of Mr. Dean his liability was discounted 50 per cent. These are samples of the persecutions to which farmers are subjected. In some instances the vender and the owner of the patent seem to be in collusion. For instance, a set of men go through the country with wagon-loads of gates and dispose of them to the farmers, who pay a full consideration and have no knowledge that they are patented, and after they are set up and in daily use another set of men scour the country and notify the purchasers of these gates that the hinge or some other portion of it is patented and that they are the owners of such patent, and thereupon a demand is made for five ten, fifteen or twenty dollars' damages for infringement, and if payment is refused suit is threatened in the United States court. To avoid this they frequently submit to outrageous exaction; and so, under threat of judicial inquisition, our people are being plundered without stint or mercy. I hope this measure will receive the prompt approval of this house, that the people who purchase patented articles in the open market in good faith and for a full consideration shall not be hunted down by these insatiate vampires.

Michigan Crop Report

The following is the Michigan crop report prepared and published by the Secretary of State:

For this report returns have been received from 938 correspondents, representing 696 townships. Five hundred and ninety-five of these returns are from 405 townships in the southern four tiers of counties.

The reports show that wheat was injured in all parts of the State by the cold, dry weather during the month of April. That on clay soil suffered severely. The acreage winter-killed in the southern four tiers of counties, and also in the entire State, is ten per cent. of the acreage sowed. The condition of wheat not winter-killed is estimated to be forty-two per cent. better in the southern four tiers of counties, and thirty-three per cent. better in the entire State, than on the 1st of May, 1881.

The condition of clover on the first day of May was not as promising as on the first of April. Thirty-eight per cent., or nearly two-fifths of the acreage in the southern four tiers of counties, and thirty-two per cent., or nearly two-thirds of the total acreage in the State. is reported winter-killed. The condition of clover not winter-killed is, in the southern four tiers, twelve per cent., and in the State, nine per cent., below the condition May 1, 1881.

The outlook for apples and peaches is favorable; but many of the correspondents express fear that the severe freeze on May 1 had injured, and in some localities possibly ruined, peaches.

Cattle and sheep are reported to be in better condition than one year ago.

Reports have been received of the quantity of wheat marketed by farmers during the month of April at 348 elevators and m lls. Of these 285 are in the southern four tiers of counties, which is six-tenths of the whole number of elevators and mills in these counties. The total number of bushels reported marketed is 971,490, of which 244,553 bushels were marketed in the first or southern tier of counties, 285,-277 bushels in the second tier, 195,590 bushels in the third tier 212,731 bushels in the fourth tier and 33,339 bushels in the counties north of the southern four tiers. At forty-eight elevators and mills, or fourteen per cent. of the whole number from which reports have been received, there was no wheat marketed during the month. At 203 elevators and mills the quantity of wheat marketed was 691,882 bushels, which is nearly one and eight-tenths times the quantity marketed at the same places during the month of March.

An Incident of the Anti-slavery Agitation.

A "RESURRECTED POEM," published in the Manchester Mirror, treats of political matters in New Hampshire many years ago. John G. Whittier acknowledges the authorship of the poem in a letter to John C. French, of Manchester, a former resident of this town. There is an allusion in it to an interesting incident which occured here.

Announcement has been made that the Rev. George Storrs would address the citizens of Pittsfield on the subject of American Slavery, on Fast Day, the 8th of April, 1863 at the Calvin Baptist Church, which was then situated on the common, at the south part the village. There was much excitement on the morning of the day, with threats against the speaker. When the people assembled at the church, at the appointed hour, it was found locked, and the key was said to be in the possession of one of the deacons, some two miles away. It was soon opened, however, by a boy named Gilbert Jenks who climbed in at a window and unfastened the door from within. The boy was saved from arrest by Deacon Thomas Berry, who assumed the responsibility of his act. Rev. Mr. Storrs delivered his address without interruption. Among the audience was a prominent lawyer, who left when the address was about half through. The pastor of the church, Rev. Mr. Richardson, was at Deerfield, exchanging with the Baptist minister of that town. Rev. Jonathan Curtiss, afterward settled at Woodstock, Conn., as pastor of the First Congregational Church in that town, author of the hymn pastor of the Congregational church in Pittsfield, occupied the pulpit with the speaker.

While Mr. Storrs was kneeling beside Mr. Curtiss, who was making the closing prayer, a sheriff came into the house, walked up the aisle, and, entering the pulpit, laid his hand upon his shoulder; but did not disturb him further till the prayer was ended. When Rev. Mr. Curtiss had opened his eyes after the prayer, and comprehended the situation, extending his arm, he said, emphatically, "My friends, recollect this is a free country," and gave notice that there would be a lecture in the Congregational Church in the afternoon, on the same subject, by Dr. Storrs or some one else. Mr. Storrs asked the sheriff by what authority he arrested him. The sheriff produced a warrant, and sittimg down in the pulpit commenced to read it in a low voice. Mr. James Joy, a prominent citizen of the town and father of the Hon. James F. Joy, of Detroit, called on the sheriff to stand up and read the warrant in a tone that could be heard by the audience, if he was not ashamed to. After the reading of the warrant, Mr. Storrs was led away by the sheriff and arrainged before a justice, the charge against him being based upon his anti-slavery lecture. Pleading not guilty, he asked for an hour and a half in which to prepare for trial, which, being granted him and Mr. Joy and Dr. Jeremiah Blake becoming responsible for his appearance, he immediately repaired to the Congregational Church and made a second address before the people. After the services a court was held in this church, which was then and is still used as the town-hall of Pittsfield. Mr. Storrs was sentenced to the house of correction for three months. He appealed to a higher court, and finding bail, was released. About six months after, he returned from the West, where he was then residing, to attend this court; but finding no accuser, was discharged. We believe that all the prominet actors in this affair, save two, are dead. One of these favored the defense and one the prosecution.—Concord (N. H.) Monitor.

Antiseptic surgery originated with Lemaine and was perfected by Lister from whom it takes its name. Its success has been used as an argument in favor of the germ theory.

Signor Garcia was the first man who is known to have had sufficient ingenuity to see his own larynx, prior to his time all endeavors at inspecting the living larynx were unsatisfactory, since through the exertions and investigations of Professors Turck and Czermak the art of laryngoscopy has been created and rapidly developed.

In Pfluger's Archives attention has been called to the fact that a healthy ear may become so fatigued by hearing one note continuously for a long time as to become incapable of recognizing it, while the other ear which has not been subjected to this source of excition will act in the ordinary manner, similarly the deafness of boiler makers may be explained. In them the continuous tension upon the tensor tympani muscles and the steady sonorous vibration acting upon the auditory nerve deaden these to such an extent that they will no longer respond to the usual stimuli.

Lord Shaftsbury says there are annually 100,000 preventible deaths in England, and a gentleman named Chadwick, former chief officer of the first English board of health, puts the estimate still higher. According to his figures 120,000 deaths, and 1,200,-000 cases of serious sickness in England every year might be prevented. Mr. Chadwick also states that so far as he could ascertain the healthiest place in England was a jail in which the deathrate was less than one in a thousand. The reason for this in his opinion was that in jails regular personal ablutions are required and the use of tea, tobacco, beer and spirits absolutely prohibited.

The progress of research has produced many varieties of sugars. These agree in the sweet taste and in the fact of their all being composed of carbon, hydrogen and oxygen, a singular peculiarity in the case is that the hydrogen and oxygen are invariably present in just the proportion necessary to form water, so that sugar might be roughly defined as a chemical combination of carbon and water. The numerous varieties have been arranged in the two great groups sucroses and glucoses. To the sucroses belong cane and milk sugar called also lactose. The former occurs in the bodies of many plants as for example the sugar-cane, sorghum, corn, palm, sugar-maple, and beet, and is obtained from the juice by evaporation. By long boiling it loses the property of crystallizing as sugar and becomes slightly acid. If boiled for hours in the presence of a trace of oil of vitriol it is transformed into grape-sugar, from which it differs by containing less water. Cane-sugar melts at 320° and on cooling forms the transparent, solid, amber-colored barley sugar. Heated to 420° it loses water, carbon remains in excess and burnt sugar or caramel results. In chemical properties sugar is classed with the acids as it unites with the bases to form salts, known as saccharates. Lactose is obtained by crystallization from evaporating the clarified whey of milk. It has hard crystals, and is less soluble, and not as sweet as cane or grape sugar. Fruit and grape sugar belong to the glucoses. Under polarized light the former rotates the plane of polarization to the left and hence has been called lævulose, the latter rotates it to the right, hence the name dextrose. Lævulose was formerly considered to be a distinct variety of sugar, but is now regarded as a combination of several varieties. Fruit sugar never crystallizes, grape sugar does. The latter is less soluble, less easily crystallized, and not as sweet as cane-sugar.

The Mysterious Whisky Bill.

The N. Y. Herald says a mysterious bill, after passing the House of Representatives without a dozen members getting a taste of its contents, is now producing a delirium in the upper branch of Congress which resembles what might have been expected if too much of the liquid had slipped out of bond and got into the heads of the Senators.

A young man in Denver, Col., while engaged in repairing an electric lamp, mounted a high step ladder, and, with a wire in each hand, was about to connect the circuit when the current was turned on. The shock completely paralyzed him, and he fell backward off the ladder. He has brought a suit for damages against the company, and the trial will be an interesting one. He claims that the current was turned on before the usual time, which the company denies. One side of his face is still paralyzed, and the doctors think it will remain so the rest of his life.

PILES! PILES!! PILES!!!
A Sure Cure Found at Last. No One Need Suffer.

A sure cure for the Blind, Bleeding, Itching and Ulcerated Piles has been discovered by Dr. Williams (an Indian remedy), called Dr. Williams' Indian Ointment. A single box has cured the worst chronic cases of 25 and 30 years standing. No one need suffer five minutes after applying this wonderful soothing medicine. Lotions, Instruments, and Electuaries do more harm than good. Williams' Ointment absorbs the tumors, allays the intense itching (particularly at night after getting warm in bed), acts as a poultice, gives instant and painless relief, and is prepared only for Piles, itching of the private parts, and nothing else.

Read what the Hon. J. M. Coffinberry, of Cleveland, says about Dr. Williams' Indian Pile Ointment: "I have used scores of pile cures, but it affords me pleasure to say that I have never fonnd anything which gave such immediate and permanent relief as Dr. Williams' Indian Ointment."

THE OLD FASHIONED SPELLING BOOK.

Gen. Orthography's troops are in a panic, I ween,
In ill-fitting uniforms, commanders disguised, or unseen,
There's the prologue, dialogue, demagogue, decalogue,
Uniformed as Umbagog, Memphramagog—and all incog—
Ancient test of endurance, incomprehensibility.
Steps into line with valetudinarian, indivisibility,
We laugh at pneumonia, find fun in dyspepsia,
Are bold to attack Rensselaerville, Poughkeepsie;
Oh, the dear spelling-book will grow dim with the ages,
As "my mother's Bible," with its unsoiled pages,
Coming out of the mists, grotesquely attired,
Rousseau and Voltaire is the gospel admired
Short cuts to wisdom, to wealth, is the rule,
To be pious and plodding is to be reckoned a fool.

From coercion, ascension, there arose much dissension,
And o'er a missed intention was ofttimes contention,
Valiant hearts o'er the Dniester and Dnieper successfully sailed,
They climbed Chimborazo, were in Popocatapetl lost,
At Sevastapol and Balaklava were reckoned a host,
Ere their allies were smitten with modern reform,
With pusillanimous freaks to fair pages deform.

Oh, the merry bells, on a winter's night,
And the big, big sleigh,
And the boys, and the girls,
Who went sleighing and spelling away
To the Gurney school house, to the Brazee,
To the old octagon;
Oh, the fainting hearts—and the joyous hearts—at victories won,
With fear and foreboding 'gan the choosing of sides.
First chosen, Hal—opposite, May—
The one or the other decides.
No combination of vowels and consonants
Could put us to rout,
If it fell to the lot of our teacher
The words to put out.
New-fangled orthography's not ornamental,
But stilted and plain,
Without need of study, without exercises
For tongue or for brain.

WHO SHALL JUDGE.

Who shall judge man from his manners?
Who shall know him by his dress?
Paupers may be fit for princes,
Princes fit for something less.
Crumpled shirt and dirty jacket
May beclothe the golden ore
Of the deepest thoughts and feelings—
Satin vest can do no more.

There are streams of crystal nectar
Ever flowing out of stone;
There are purple beds and golden,
Hidden, crushed and overthrown.
God, who counts by souls, not dresses,
Loves and prospers you and me.
While he values thrones the highest,
But as pebbles in the sea.

Oft forgets his fellows then;
Masters—rulers—lords, remember
That your meanest hinds are men!
Men of labor, men of feeling,
Men of thought, and men of fame,
Claiming equal rights to sunshine
In a man's ennobling name.

There are foam-embroided oceans;
There are little wood-clad rills;
There are feeble inch high saplings;
There are cedars on the hills.
God, who counts by souls, not stations,
Loves and prospers you and me,
For to Him, all vain distinctions
Are as pebbles in the sea.

Toiling hands alone are builders
Of a nation's wealth and fame,
Tilted laziness is pensioned,
Fed and fattened on the same;
By the sweat of others' foreheads,
Living only to rejoice,
While the poor man's outraged freedom
Vainly lifts his feeble voice.

Truth and justice are eternal,
Born with loveliness and light;
Secret wrongs shall never prosper
While there is a sunny right.
God, whose world-wide voice is singing
Boundless love to you and me,
Links oppression with its titles,
But as pebbles in the sea.

TREED BY A LEOPARD.

I was a harum-scarum young cavalry officer then, and delighted in nothing so much as in fool-hardy adventures, loving danger for the keen excitement it afforded, without taking into consideration its possible ultimate result. Besides this innate love for adventure, I had inherited from my father, a professor of natural philosophy, a strong love for the study of animals and birds, and this latter passion alone would have been sufficient to lead me into many perilous situations, without any additional motives.

At the period to which I refer, our regiment was stationed in the Teral, only a few miles from a little Hindoo village; the latter was situated in a remarkably pleasant spot, and in its midst dwelt an Irishman, whose roomy, bamboo dwelling furnished the favorite resort for recreation of us young officers. Whenever it was possible to obtain leave of absence for a day or two, we made a double quick charge into Mike's cozy quarters, and then sallied forth into the jungles with several Ghoorkha attendants, to hunt leopards and tigers. I had been for over a year in quest of the nest of a particularly rare species of burrowing beetle, and upon the obtaining of which I had pledged my reputation for enterprise and perseverance.

A Ghoorkha lad, whom I had employed in the quest, came into my quarters one morning with the news that he had at last located the desired 'nest' I plead with my Colonel for leave to seek it out. It was granted, and on the following day I rode into the Ghoorkha village, full of enthusiasm, only to find that my promised guide, in company with all the able-bodied men of the cummunity, had sallied forth in pursuit of a much-dreaded 'man eater' who had for months been creating sad havoc among the terrified natives. Startled out of the abject fear of the luckabagga that had hitherto paralyzed their pursuit, the inhabitants had seized their arms, and gone out in a body to the jungle, hoping to enclose the 'man eater' in a circle, and put an end to his frightful devastations. An urgent message had been left me, to join them, and a native boy left behind to be my guide, but on inquiry I found the latter had disappeared hiding as I afterward discovered. in terror of being compelled to enter the jungle. I stood for a moment in a quandary; well armed as I was, it was no prudent thing for a single man to venture into those dense thickets, especially when the near neighborhood of such a terrible enemy was a matter of certainty, it was an equal chance that the hunter might become the hunted; the slayer, the slain. I have said, there was within me an ardent longing for adventure, and now in addition I was determined not to return to the barracks, without an effort to obtain those coveted beetles; consequently, after a short consideration, I stabled my horse and plunged into the jungle unattended, having first obtained as minute direction as possible, both as to the position of the beetles nest and that of the hunting party.

I need scarcely say, that foolhardy as I was, I did not pursue my laborious course through the thick jungle without keeping a sharp watch, with both eyes and ears that none of its fierce denizens might take me unawares.

It so chanced that the insects I was so desirous of obtaining had located their nest at the foot of a large tree that stood alone on the very verge of a small open space in the jungle where a year or two back, an enterprising native had essayed to start a plantation, but had been compelled to leave it on account of the frequent inroads of tigers and leopards. Hence it was that I was enabled to find the exact spot I wished to reach, otherwise it would have been like hunting a needle in a haystack. After two hours cautious marching, I stood at the foot of the wide spreading tree, and beheld at last my long-coveted specimens running to and fro about their subterranean dwelling, unsuspicious of the destroyer near at hand, just as unsuspicious in fact, as he himself was, of the slayer in waiting for him!

It was a moment of triumph, such as only an enthusiastic naturalist can appreciate; those beetles were extremely rare, so rare indeed, that more than one eminent scientist refused to credit their actual existence, and I had pledged my word to convince these sceptics and produce to the world the mysterious insects; for over twelve months the obtaining of specimens had been my chief anxiety, and now in the excitement of my complete success, I entirely forgot the necessity of keeping watch upon my surroundings.

Not wishing to lay my rifle down in the dirt, I rested it against a young tree a few yards away and dropping on my knees, pounced with eager eyes upon the large glossy blue beetles; one by one I placed my coveted treasures in my well furnished 'entomologists' box' I always carried buckled at my waist, first putting each to a painless death, by means of a few drops of chloroform.

A hideous noise whose purport I knew full well, sounded almost at my elbow, and leaping to my feet my blood chilled as I beheld the dreaded 'man eater' of whom the village was in pursuit, crouched within twenty feet of me, his red eyes glaring, his sides heaving, his tail lashing the ground. I was paralyzed; then the instinct of self-preservation rose up in all the plentitude of its power and I took in the whole scene, and my well nigh desperate chances for escape, at one glance.

My rifle was lost to me; the lashing tail of the 'luckabagga' actually touched it. I had only my revolver, and there was not a second to lose in its use; already the huge spotted form of my enemy was quivering preparatory to its terrible death dealing leap.

Flash! bang, the little weapon spoke out nobly, but I did not pause to see the result of its speech; I was an expert climber, had 'swarmed' up many a smoother tree than the one whose branches spread above me; so the instant my finger had sped the leaden messenger on its errand, I commenced a rapid ascent not knowing but death might overtake me before I reached the lowermost branches.

I heard a sharp cry, and a crashing among the underbrush, but not till I had gained a resting place did I look downward to see what damage my shot had done.

That glance was not reassuring; apparently it had missed its mark altogether; the luckabagga had not only made his intended leap, but was already at the foot of the tree and preparing for another leap upon its trunk, with the object of following me into its branches; only one thing could save me, (for as everyone knows, the leopard is an expert climber), that was to empty the remaining shots in my revolver into his body as he mounted the tree trunk.

Only those who have been in similar desperate situations, and have seen their last hope lost, can appreciate the thrill of horror that crept over me as putting my hand to my belt, I found that in my hasty ascent, my one weapon had fallen to the ground, and now lay, glistening beneath the feet of the furious 'luckabagga.'

True, I had a hunting-knife, but that would not avail to save me from those death-dealing claws, once they came near enough to seize upon me.

I had only one forlorn hope left me now, to climb higher and higher, until I found a branch which would bear my weight, but not that of the terrible man-eater, for with all his ferocity, he is like an elephant, a veritable coward, as to trusting himself upon an insufficient foothold, and is wonderfully keen in detecting branches that will not bear his weight. I, therefore, climbed higher, but soon perceiving the menacing growls came no nearer, I paused to look down. Who can describe my thankfulness at discovering that my one hasty shot had, after all, done good service. One of those fearful forepaws was broken, and it was in vain that the maddened creature leaped again and again, in the endeavor to climb the tree and secure his prey. His climbing days were over, as I felt with a thrill of exultation, so I slipped down again to the lower branches and placing myself as comfortably as I might be among them, resolved to wait quietly until my enemy should depart.

Becoming convinced at length that he could not reach me, the luckabagga evidently made up his mind to starve me out, so he lay quietly down beneath the tree, contenting himself with licking his wounded paw and winking his red eyes at me, as much as to say, 'never mind, my boy, I'll have you after awhile.' And truly, I began to think he would, for as the hours rolled on and night approached, I became terribly cramped and faint with hunger, and moreover came the fear that I might in spite of myself, drop asleep and fall from the tree.

It was in vain that I shouted and flung down my cap, my belt, my beloved entomologists' box, with all its array of bottles and insect-preserving powders. my beseiger was not to be frightened away.

Night came on and the leopard still lay beneath the tree. I could see the gleam of his hungry eyes fixed upon me through the darkness. I was becoming drowsy, when my attention was attracted by the noise of some creature crashing through the jungle near by and the next moment there came a fierce roar, answered by another from my beseiger. And then such a roaring. growiing, hissing. snarling and tumbling, as went on in the dense shadow of the tree, I hope never to hear again; it was evident that a duel to the death was going on, though I could only see the glint of two pairs of red eyes.

For ten minutes did the combat rage, and then the uproar gradually died away, until only an occasional moan could be heard, and after awhile this too, ceased, and a total silence succeeded. How anxiously I waited for daylight to reveal my position; whether a prisoner or freeman, may easily be conceived. When the blessed sun did at length send down his rays upon the scene, I fairly shouted aloud in the my joy at the spectacle that met my sight. My enemy of the night before lay dead. nearly torn to pieces, while stretched at his side, lay his assailant, a magnificent tiger; the latter bore no marks upon him save a few scratches, yet he was dead, as I proved before descending, by throwing my boots down upon him. Within two minutes after making sure of this fact, I was on my knees beside the splendid carcass, before whose superior strength it was evident my own particular enemy had gone down, an end to which his broken leg had no doubt contributed; but to what the tiger owed his death, I could not perceive, as he had scarcely a scratch upon him. But the mystery was solved when I came upon the fragments of a bottle that had held the cyanide of potassium I carried with me for the preservation of insect specimens. It had been in the box I had thrown down in hopes of frightening the leopard, and during the brief combat it had no doubt got broken and the powder becoming rubbed into the wounds of the 'luckabagga' had been absoreed in the flesh eaten by the tiger, and thus had the slayer's appetite slain himself and preserved me; for if he had lived, I should ultimately have fallen into his clutches, I make no doubt.

You may rest assured that I lost no time in making my way back to the village, where the exhibition of the tails of the dreaded man-eater and the scarcely less feared tiger, caused the wildest demonstrations of joy, in which I shared, not alone because of my miraculous escape, but because I at last held in my hand those coveted beetles.—Southern World.

Red Snow.

At a meeting of the San Francisco Microscopical Society, Dr. Harkness presented a bottle of "red snow," which he gathered on the Wasatch Mountains. The snow was found on the north side of a spur which rose about 10,000 feet above the sea-level, and when fresh had the appearance of being drenched with blood, as though some large animal had been killed. The red snow is caused by the presence of a one-celled plant called Protococcus nivalis, which reproduces itself by subdivision—that is, the cell divides itself into several new cells. This is done with great rapidity, and a few cells lodged in the snow, under favorable conditions, soon will give it the appearance called red snow. The phenomenon of red snow has been observed from the earliest times, as Aristotle has a passage which is thought to refer to it. The subject was, however, lost sight of until brought up by the investigations of Saussure, who found red snow on the Alps in 1760. He made chemical tests which showed him that the red color was due to the presence of vegetable matter, which he supposed might be the pollen of some plant. In 1819 an Arctic expediton under Captain Ross brought some specimens from the cliffs around Baffin's Bay, and they were examined by eminent botanists, some of whom mistook the nature of the plant, and there was long discussion as to its proper classification, some fungus, some a lichen; but it was finally set at rest as one of the unicellular algæ.

Heating by Sunshine.

Professor E. S. Morse, of the Essex Institute, has devised an ingenious arrangement for utilizing the heat in the sun's rays in warming our houses. His invention consists of a surface of blackened slate under glass fixed to the sunny side or sides of a house, with vents in the walls so arranged that the cold air of a room is let out at the bottom of the slate, and forced in again at the top by the ascending heated column between the slate and the glass. The out-door air can be admitted, also, if desirable. The thing is so simple and apparently self-evident that one only wonders that it has not always been in use. Its entire practicalness is demonstrated in the heating of the professor's study in his cottage at Salem. The value of the improvement for daily warming buildings like churches and schoolhouses, which, when allowed to get cold between using, consume immense quantities of heat before they are fully warmed up again, is evident. Of course some other means of heating must be available when the sun does not shine. But in the colder regions, say in the far northwest, the sun shines a greater part of the time, and hence the saving of artificial heat would be very large if the sun heat could be "turned on" for eight or ten hours out of the twenty-four.

Wouldn't St. Peter have looked surprised if some one had told him his successor would be sending blessings on a wire across the ocean before nineteen hundred years were passed?

KINDNESS is the golden chain by which society is bound together.

Mohammedan Sensualism.

No one of the Mohammedan races has carried out the license given to sensual passion by the Koran and the adhering tradition to such an extent as have the Ottoman Turks, and no race has suffered so much from that license. The evil consequences are far-reaching and haleful in the extreme. It is to feed Turkish sensuality that the slave trade throughout the empire and in the interior of Africa is maintained. The beautiful, fair daughters who are purchased from the Georgians and Circassians also find their way at last to the harems of Constantinople, Brusa, Smyrna, Adrianople, Aleppo, Bagdad, and other towns and cities of Asia Minor. One of the direct results of this sensuality is that the Turks have degenerated physically during the past 200 years. That the conquerors of Constantinople were a hardy race of great physical strength there can be no doubt; that the great majority of modern Turks are of an effeminate type is equally certain; very many of them are persons of fine appearance, but they are physically weak, without elasticity, giving the impression of men who have lost their vitality. The same may be said even more emphatically of Turkish women; they are small in stature, of a tickly complexion, easily fatigued by slight exertion, and become prematurely old. After the age of 40 all feminine beauty is gone; the eyes have become sunken, the cheeks hollow, and the face wrinkled, and there remains no trace of the activity and physical strength often seen in English women of 65 or even of 70 years of age. Another immediate result of the prevailing sensuality is the mental imbecility of multitudes of the Ottoman Turks; great numbers among them are intellectually stupid. Many even of the young men have the vacant look which borders close on the idiotic state. Severe mental application is for them almost a physical impossibility. It is well known that in all branches of business where considerable mental activity is required the Turks employ christians to work for them. This is owing, not so much to a lack of education, or to a general want of energy, as in many cases to a mental incapacity which often amounts to real imbecility. Obvious illustrations of the special topic now discussed is furnished by the royal family itself. Sultan Mejid, Sultan Aziz, and the deposed Sultan Murad were all men of depraved minds, vicious habits, intemperate and sensual in the extreme, and were alike devoid of moral character and mental capacity. Mental incapacity, however, from the causes alleged is not confined by any means to the wealthy and aristocratic classes; it is found in all grades of society.—British Quarterly Review.

Drunkenness in St. Petersburg.

A commission has been appointed in Russia, and has recently been sitting at St. Petersburg, under the presidency of Prince Schtscherpatoff, to consider what measures should be taken against the spread of drunkenness in that country. The drink-havoc among the peasants is very great. A St. Petersburg correspondent of the Cologne Gazette says, "The peasants' earnings are almost all spent in brandy, and this is the chief cause of the famines which periodically devastate the country." The same writer adds: "When last year subscriptions were collected all over the empire to provide the southeastern provinces, which were suffering from famine, with seed-corn, it was proved that the inhabitants of those provinces had in that year paid 7,000,000 roubles in taxes for the brandy they had made for their own consumption out of the corn which would otherwise have prevented them from starving. What brandy is doing for the ruin of the peasants of Russia, beer and whiskey are doing to degrade and destroy many of their devotees in this country. Of the sixty million dollars revenue which the distillers and brewers boast that their traffic pays to the government of this country, a very large part comes from the scant purses of working men and women who continually, day by day, waste their half-dimes and dimes for mugs of beer and glasses of whisky.

A "National Total Abstinence Society" has been organized in Switzerland to stay the tide of drunkenness which is sweeping over the land.

WITH a little consideration, a good word may be said for almost anything, even for whiskey. An eloquent Irish priest said to his people lately "It is whiskey that keeps you poor; it is whiskey that makes you shoot at your landlords—yes, and miss them too."

Dr. Kedzie says that the adulteration of sugar is increasing. He has detected glucose in granulated sugar. This. if pure, is not injurious but glucose is not usually pure.

Humbugged Again.

I saw so much said about the merits of Hop Bitters, and my wife who was always doctoring, and never well, teased me so urgently to get her some, I concluded to be humbugged again; and I am glad I did, for in less than two months' use of the Bitters, my wife was cured, and she has remained so for eighteen months since. I like such humbugging.—H. T., St. Paul.—Pioneer Press.

Dear Bitters—I am here trying to breathe in all the salt air of the ocean, and having been a sufferer for more than a year with a refractory liver, I was induced to mix Hop Bitters with the sea gale, and have found the tincture a glorious result. * * * I have been greatly helped by the Bitters, and am not afraid to say so. The Repression bill is still being discussed in the House of Commons. The spirit of revolution in Ireland is fully aroused.

HOUSEHOLD ACCIDENTS.

The following suggestions are not designed to induce the public to attempt the duties of the regular surgeon, but, merely to place the readers of these pages in possession of a means of treatment of the minor accidents occurring daily in the household, and which, while not dangerous in themselves, are exceedingly annoying. Burns, bruises, scalds, sprains, etc., are principal among these troublesome and annoying occurences, and demand immediate treatment with the best means at hand. In the kitchen, the dining-hall. the nursery and the sitting-room they are liable to happen, and, instead of fear and alarm at the sight of the cut or mashed finger, or bruised or burned arm, or scalded surface, a cool and quiet manner should be assumed, and after washing away the blood, (if required), the injured parts should be dressed with that most valuable remedy—ST. JACOBS OIL. Its surprisingly quick relief, its cleansing properties, its tendency to quickly remove all inflammation, and its wonderful efficacy in the above as well as in all muscular and other pains, such as rheumatism, neuralgia, toothache, headache, stiffness of the joints, etc.,—these render ST. JACOBS OIL pre-eminently the best external remedy now before the people; which claim is fully substantiated by the strongest kind of testimony from all classes of people. The value of human life is so supremely important that anything that tends to its prolongation is entitled to the highest consideration. Charles Nelson, Esq., proprietor Nelson House, Port Huron, Mich., says: "I suffered so with rheumatism that my arm withered, and physicians could not help me. I was in despair of my life, when some one advised me to try ST. JACOBS OIL. I did so, and, as if by magic, I was instantly relieved, and by the continued use of the Oil entirely cured. I thank heaven for having used this wonderful remedy, for it saved my life. It also cured my wife."

NEILSON'S SECRET FOR THE COMPLEXION
A Most Elegant Toilet Preparation.
As its name implies, it was the favorite and only preparation used by that most beautiful and accomplished actress, MISS ADELAIDE NEILSON, for whom it was expressly prepared and supplied by the inventor, not only during her stay in this country, but when in England and Europe. The wondrous transparent beauty and freshness of complexion, for which MISS NEILSON was noted, is the best recommendation that can be offered in its behalf. It is a most delightful adjunct to the toilet, especially after exposure to the hot sun or winds, as it prevents tan, freckles, etc., and gives a delightful cooling and refreshing feeling to the surface. It is perfectly harmless. The proprietress offers ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS to any one who can find even a trace of any mineral, poisonous, or deleterious substance whatever, in NEILSON'S SECRET for the complexion.
This "recherche" preparation for the toilet does not give a whitewashed appearance to the face, like Humpty Dumpty in the Pantomime, but so assimilates itself with the skin that it cannot be detected even under the brilliant glare of the Electric Light. PRICE, 25 CENTS,
Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in Fancy Goods, or will be sent by mail upon receipt of price in stamps. Address

D. HARTER'S IRON TONIC
A combination of Iron, Peruvian Bark and Phosphorus in a palatable form. The only preparation of iron that will not blacken the teeth, so characteristic of other iron preparations.
GENTLEMEN: I have used DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC in my practice, and in an experience of twenty-five years in medicine, have never found anything to give the results that DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC does. In many cases of Nervous Prostration, Female Diseases, Dyspepsia, and an impoverished condition of the blood, this peerless remedy, has in my hands, made some wonderful cures. Cases that have baffled some of our most eminent physicians, have yielded to this great and incomparable remedy. I prescribe it in preference to any iron preparation made. In fact, such a compound as DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC is a necessity in my practice.
ST. LOUIS, MO., Nov. 26th, 1881. DR. ROBERT SAMUELS, 3104 Wash Avenue.
It gives color to the blood, natural healthful tone to the digestive organs and nervous system, making it applicable to General Debility, Loss of Appetite, Prostration of Vital Powers and Impotence.

THE COMMERCIAL.

Good Will to Man—Onward and Upward.

SATURDAY, May 27, 1882.

The short crops of 1881 are telling heavily on our foreign trade.

The trouble with Don Henderson is that which sooner or later befalls all parties who try to boss it over a Republican heritage.

Cammeron the played out Republican boss of Pennsylvania, finds it hard to kick against the pricks. So mote it be with all bosses at home and abroad.

Slowly but surely in all the land public opinion is winding adamantine chains around the dram shops and will assuredly choke them to death.

President Arthur signed the new Chinese bill Monday. The act deprives the Democrats of all the thunder they claimed to have gained by the veto to the former bill.

Guiteau has got to hang. So says the Court En Banc. This court embracing the combined bench of the District of Columbia. Garfield's blood cryeth from the ground. Justice is to have its sway.

The enforcement of law in this country certainly grows feebler and feebler, and if the point is not already reached, it will soon be the case that decent, respectable and law abiding citizens will have to acknowledge crime and criminals as the ruling power.

We have received the Allegan Gazette published by Edwy C. Reid, former partner of Don Henderson of the Allegan Journal. The Gazette does very well. The Journal looks as if something had happened to it. Now old boys make up, join your forces and make a good paper once more.

The Argus and the Democrat, the lion and the lamb have concluded to bundle together and journey on in peace. The News says:

In view of the fact that the bloody chasm so long existing between the two democratic papers of this city has been bridged with spans of golden sheen, paved with solid planks of love, it is now reasonable to suppose that the lion of the opera house block will come out with a double leaded editorial, apologizing for the many pet names he has applied to the lamb of Huron and Main streets, while the lamb will take a three line item in which to accept the apology.

The Ypsilanti Commercial commenting on the overruling by the United States Supreme Court of the decision case in the Supreme Court of the State, takes the ground that the three judges who concured in the latter were influenced by the local feeling of opposition in Detroit, Monroe and Ann Arbor, against the road which the Salem bonds were given to aid. It attempts to bolster this post mortem opinion of calling attention to the fact that Judge Graves who dissented, represented a constituency on the other side of the question. All of which would be important if true.—Free Press.

The writer shows his utter ignorance first of the character of the decision, and second, of the editorial itself. The issue of the bonds was illegal as Salem never voted to issue bonds. The decision so far as the constitutionality of the aid law was entirely ex-partee. The decision was made upon bonds illegally issued to aid the Detroit, Lansing and Northern R. R. But it just as effectually killed the aid voted by the towns and cities from the Ohio line to Holly in behalf of the Toledo and Air Line, and extension of the Peer Marquett. We did not say that they were thus influenced. But we stated the remarkable fact of locality, and the remarkable unity in the three judges, and the very especial God-send the decision was to Ann Arbor, Monroe and Detroit. The writer shows his utter ignorance when he affirms that Judge Graves represented a constiuency averse to the Railroad Aid Policy. Michigan at that time was honey-combed by the theory and the wisdom of such theory in giving railroad aid. Judge Graves' dissenting minority opinion harmonized with this sentiment, a sentiment also held to be constitutional by the courts of this and other states. But take it for granted that public sentiment in other parts of the state was with the three judges. It makes the Free Press inference drawn from our article all the stronger. But a second perusal of the editorial in question would assure the Free Press that the COMMERCIAL drew no such inference as that the three judges were "influenced by local feeling." They were all honorable men and we could never think so. But we notice that the Commercial's mere statement of the facts compelled the Free Press to the irresistable conclusion that they were so influenced, and it would seem against the will of the editor too. Flounder away from the facts if you can. But don't be guilty of making the Commercial say what it does not.

That 2,000 saloon keepers returned personal property to the amount of $280,330, the tax on which was $6,222.29. Thus the average tax paid by them was the trifling sum of $3.11 for each saloon. The Gazette makes no mention of those who pay nothing. We have carefully examined the saloon tax list which it publishes, and find that of the total 2,000 saloon keepers 780 returned no property for taxation, and did not pay one cent in the way of taxes. Thus it appears that 1,220 saloon keepers paid only $6,222.29, an average of $5.10 each, and 780 paid absolutely nothing.

The Gazett clinches the irresistible argument of its statement by contrasting the tax payments of these saloon keepers with some of the business houses of Cincinnati. David Sinton & Co. paid $8,524.86 for personal taxes, which is 25 per cent. more than these 2,000 saloon-keepers paid, and John Shillito & C. paid $14,191.30 of personal taxes, which is more than double the amount paid by all the saloon-keepers of Cincinnati put together.

In the year 1880, in the city of Detroit, 2,979 persons were arrested for drunkenness, vagrancy, disorderly conduct and other offenses growing out of the sale of liquor. This was 64 per cent. of the arrests of the year. In many other places in the country the percentage of arrests for these causes is even greater. All this is the work of saloons. It is their addition to the cost of government. It is safe to say that John Shillito & Co. never cost the city of Cincinnati one cent for arrests, for detentions in jails, for police court trials, for riots or breaches of the peace. It is safe also to say that fully 60 per cent of all the arrests in Cincinnati and all the criminal expenses of that city, amounting in the aggregate to more than a quarter of a million dollars, have been caused by the 2,000 saloons which altogether paid in personal taxes less than half the amount paid by John Shillito & Co.

The correspondent of the Post and Tribune says:

He was forcible and logical and was listened to with marked attention by senators on both sides of the chamber. Michigan is named in the bill as one of the states to which five per cent. on the amount of lands located by military scrip and land warrants should be paid under stipulations made at the time of her admission into the Union. Certain senators opposed to the bill hold that states named in it have long ago been paid all moneys due them and that they now come to congress as beggars. Senator Gonger held that Michigan never has received such money, and in the course of his remarks he paid a high tribute to the character, industry and intelligence of the people of Michigan, saying they had taken care of themselves in the past and would do so in the future. He said Michigan comes to congress not as a beggar nor in a humble spirit, but comes for what is their just due. She asked not for generosity, simply justice. Mr. Conger was interrupted several times in his speech by Senator Vance, the recognized wit of the Democratic side, but was ready for him with his well known repartee, and succeeded easily in silencing the facetious southerner.

Address as above. N. B.—No risk is incurred, as thirty days trial is allowed. 920—971.

The kind of balderdash in the New York farmers club, our farmers will doubtless be interested if not profited.

Mr. Davis invited the club to travel with him to the top of a high mountain, where with the mind's eye they could see all the kingdom's of the world. The club jeered at this proposition, and intimated that they would not go. Mr. Davis acquitted himself of some terrible charge which he did not specify and placed it upon the shoulders of the Governments of earth. He remarked that the Governments in question did something or other to the prattling babe, and kept at it till the babe reached maturity.

The Chair said that Mr. Davis was talking nonsense.

Farmer Martin asked the Chair to allow Mr. Davis plenty of rope.

Mr. Davis made a few remarks about the similarity of persecuting him (Mr. Davis).

The club began to stamp, and a voice cried, "Balderdash!"

The Rev. Farmer from Maryland spoke eloquently of the beneficence of this Government, and quoted from Sir James Mackintosh, Voltaire, Webster, Hamilton, Jefferson, and John Adams.

Mr. Davis said that children took in the idea of hell together with their mother's milk.

The Rev. Farmer asked Mr. Davis if his mother taught him to believe in hell.

Mr. Davis replied that she did.

The Rev. Farmer retorted that Mrs. Davis was an excellent woman, and told Mr. Davis to take care.

Amid great confusion the voice of Mr. Davis, who is an Englishman, was heard exclaiming: "Get thee be'ind me, Saturn!"

Farmer Garrish obtained the floor and fulminated a little bit of political economy which, figuratively speaking, knocked Mr. Davis sky high. Farmer Garrish said that Mr. Davis was a disappointed man, soured by the miscarriage of his corrupt schemes. Mr. Davis, the farmer continued, had no brains. Genius was born in aman, as, for instance, metrical genius in the Poet Cutter. The farmer asked Mr. Davis to forbear from making his broad assertions and his sweeping remarks, and to go to the polls to effect the correction of his grievances. Beyond the boundaries of civilization, Farmer Garrish said, you found barbarism. The farmer hoped that God would not take Mr. Davis out of the world before he became converted, for an immediate transition of Mr. Davis to a future state would be horrible.

Great applause followed Farmer Garrish's fiery attack. When it had subsided, a young man, a stranger, arose near the door and timidly asked to be informed as to the condition of the trees, the lambs, and the little deers in the country. He said that, being country born, and cooped up now among city walls, he felt a yearning desire to know how these matters of which he had spoken were getting along. The young man added, some what impudently, that there were 15-year-old boys in one of the class rooms up stairs who could give the Solons of the Farmers' Club points on political economy.

The young man was effectually snubbed. Another stranger, who said that his name was MacDonald, asked to be informed whether the club was a prayer meeting.

He also was snubbed.

Still another stranger inquired whether a few remarks on sugar would be in order. The club was hardly in a mood to hear anything on this subject, but had the consistency to encourage the stranger, who spoke briefly concerning the cultivation of sorghum in the Northwest.

Mr. Davis asked if he might speak again.

The Chair asked Mr. Davis if he wished to speak about sugar.

Mr. Davis replied that the remarks which he wished to make would apply more particularly to the proposition, "Material Civilization a Necessary Basis for a High Order of Wealth.

The applicant was suppressed.

The club adjourned.

Congressman Willits, of the Second district made another able speech in the house of representatives Thursday, when he discussed the question of disposing of the remainder of the Geneva award. He took the position that the money does not belong to the United States, but to individual losers; the question as to whether the money of right belongs to the insurance companies is one which should be settled by the courts. This position is the only just one, but it is not by any means the only one advocated on the floors of congress. Mr. Willits is one of the most valuable men in the house, and he should be kept there.—Every Saturday.

How to Save.

It is stated that Rev. S. Jones visited New York a hundred years ago, and wishing to find some of Baptist faith, enquired for such of a man on a door step. The man questioned took off his red cap, scratched his head and replied: "Really, I don't know as ever I heard of anybody in these parts of that occupation." Since that time, however, Baptists have been found in those parts, and in such numbers and condition that they have repeatedly entertained the anniversary meetings of our great national societies.—Michigan Christian Herald.

It certainly does look like it, when as last week, 6000 Baptist Sunday School children are in line. Six regiments on Broadway with banners, bearing the motto, "Roger Williams and soul liberty.'

COUNTY ITEMS.

YPSILANTI TOWN

Quarterly meeting Saturday and Sunday at Rawsonville.

Mr. Quick of Rawsonville lost a valuable horse Tuesday; inflamation of the lungs.

Lots of fruit blossoms and acres of nightly frosts. Fruit does not seem to be injured as yet.

Mr. Mead Kelsey, Chicago, and Miss Nora Crittenden, Ruggles, Ohio, have been visiting their uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Crittenden.

Mr. and Mrs. King of Grand Rapids, Mr. and Mrs. Brown of Redwing, Minn., and Mrs. Hedges from Jamestown, N. Y., have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Will Brock.

The sudden death of Lewis Smith is received everywhere in this place, where he lived for years, with sorrowing hearts and heartfelt sympathy for his lone wife and little children.

Lemuel Allen of this town, and Wm. Ward of Augusta have each had a very long and severe illness from lung fever and do not recover. They offer their farms for sale, wishing to settle in California, in hopes the climate will prove beneficial.

From the Courier.

Work on the new post office is rapidly progressing. Nearly, if not quite, half enough stone to build the foundation walls will be found, digging the cellar. Which is a great saving to Mr. Gates who has the contract.

Ex-postmaster, C. G. Clark, and family, left for St. Lawrence, Dakata, last Monday evening, where they will reside. Mr. Clark has been a resident of Ann Arbor for many years, and in losing him the city loses one of its best citizens. Everyone wishes him success in his new home.

Rev. Park S. Donelson, D. D. of Central Ohio Conference, died at Dexter, Mich., Saturday, May 6th. His health had been poor for a number of years, and death was not unexpected. Dr. Donelson was for a long time President of the Wesleyan Female College at Delaware, Ohio, and more recently has been pastor of several leading Methodist churches in northern Ohio, Mrs. Donelson is a daughter of Judge Dexter, of Dexter, Mich.

The district lodge of Good Templars will convene in Ann Arbor, May 30. Macomb, Washtenaw and Wayne counties comprise this district, and all the lodges in these counties are expected to be represented. There will be an entertainment in the evening, for which the committee appointed in making great preparations.

It is a source of wonderment to some how so many young men get along so nicely, and wear good clothes without work. The Binghampton Leader answers the conundrum with words more than poetic, as follows: "Most of these idlers sponge their living from hard-working fathers, mothers and sisters. They have no respect for themselves or any one else, and their greatest development of character are laziness and selfishness. They spend their days in places that are not elevating to any one, and nights in the company of young girls, who, if they were acquainted with their character, would loathe and scorn them. Woe to the woman that becomes the wife of a man whose character corresponds with the above."

DEATH OF HON. CALVIN WHEELER.—Hon Calvin Wheeler, of Salem, died at his residence Wednesday, May 17, 1882, of heart disease after a long illness and great suffering, aged 76 years. He was born in Livingston Co., N. Y., Jan. 28, 1806. He was educated in his native State, and in 1830 came to Washtenaw county, locating land on sections 10 and 11, of Salem township, where he has since resided. Mr. Wheeler was married in New York in 1829 to Almira Smith. In 1831, he removed his family to this State. At the time of the Toledo war, he raised a company of about 50 men, and was elected their captain. They came as far as Ann Arbor, where Mr. Wheeler left them on account of illness in his family. The company was soon after disbanded. Mr. Wheeler was one of the first assessors of Salem after its organization, snd has held every township office, except constable. In 1851 he was elected to represent Washtenaw county in the Michigan legislature. During the session of which he was a member, the laws conformatory to the new constitution were passed. In 1872 he was appointed post-master of Salem Station. For eight years he was station agent of the D. L. & N. Railroad in the same place. He is the father of seven children, one of whom, Geo. S., is a prominent politican and merchant of Salem Station. Mr. Wheeler's life has been a very active and useful one, and his loss will be greatly felt among his circle of friends.

The Courier books up the Baptist Association held in that city. A large gathering of representives of the churches. The new church at Milan was received into membership. We quote:

"The addresses on Tuesday evening by Prof. R. W. Putnam, of Ypsilanti, Rev. Mr. Pettit, of Unadilla, Mr. Wright, and President Angell, made a most interesting meeting.

Words are cheap facts are omnipotent.

C. M. Fuller is selling organs for Sampson, of Ypsilanti.

From the Ann Arbor News.

Prosecuting Attorney Whitman in the Bycraft case made a masterly effort before the jury this forenoon. At times his lofty flights of eloquence working up the enthusiasm of the large audience to the highest pitch.

Belleville Mirador.

The public installation and open lodge meeting of Wayne Lodge of Good Templars, Wednesday evening, was a real success. Steers Hall was full, and the entertainment was well received by an appreciative audience. Fourteen members from Belleville lodge were in attendance, who arrived home in the small hours of Thursday morning.

From the News.

Judge Joslin exhibits a vein of good humor now and then to relieve the tedium of court life. A young chap to-day on the witness stand, who is making desperate efforts to raise a moustache, was constantly touching it with his fingers, when the judge requested him to keep his hand down or he would be compelled to call in a barber and have the cause of the trouble removed.

Bycraft will pine behind the bars of the hotel de Wallace, till the 31st of May, at which time he will be allowed a new trial or receive his sentence.

Judge Harriman reports business in the probate court dull. The county is healthy, the judge has a quiet conscience and is orthodox on all the great questions of the day.

From the Argus

JUDGE BEAKES.

Judge Beakes died at his residence in this city on Thursday morning at five o'clock, after a painful illness of many weeks. His mind was clear nearly to the close. For several days before his death, he realized that his disease was mortal and he awaited the end with calm resignation and Christian hope. Every attention given him, every effort made for his comfort by his family or his friends during his illness, however trifling, was appreciated and recognized in terms of touching tenderness. And just as his home was bathed in the joyous rays of the rising sun, and amid the music of the singing birds his resigned and happy spirit winged its flight from earth.

Hiram J. Beakes was born at Middletown, Orange Co., New York, on the 10th day of September 1827, and received his education at his native place. He commenced his legal studies there and afterward entered the law office of Clark and Rapallo in New York City—the latter of whom is now Judge of the Court of Appeals of New York State. Mr. Beakes was admitted to the bar in New York City in 1851, and immediately removed to Ann Arbor, where, in a few years by his perseverance and untiring industry he attained a leading position in a bar composed of such men as Alpheus Felch, Edwin Lawrence, Chauncey Joslin, Olney Hawkins, George Sedgwick, James Kingsley, James Kingsley, and others of large practice in this county twenty or more years ago. In 1854 he was elected Circuit Court Commissioner of this county, an office he held one term. He was a member of the legislature from this county during the session of 1863-4. In 1864 he was elected Judge of Probate, and re-elected in 1868—holding the office eight years. He was mayor of Ann Arbor during the years 1873 and 1874. In 1875 he formed a partnership with S. M. Cutcheon of Ypsilanti. The firm opened an office in Detroit, and at once secured a large business.

For many years Judge Beakes has stood at the head of the active practioners of the Washtenaw County Bar, and been recognized as one of the ablest lawyers of the state. He had a genuine love for his profession. He was an unwearied student of its learning. He possessed an extraordinary memory and his knowledge of particular cases and the points made and decided in those cases, as found in the books was truly remarkable. This faculty made him popular with the courts for the ordinary judge feels relieved of responsibility and labor when a case is presented which covers or settles the question in controversy. He was faithful to his clients, and his extreme care and caution that their rights or interests might not be compromised or imperilled by stipulations and outside accommodations sometimes subjected him to the criticism of his associates.

Judge Beakes was a man of scholarly tastes and habits, and of large reading outside of his profession. He took an interest in public matters and was thoroughly informed upon all the practical questions of the day.

In politics Judge Beakes was a Democrat, and the offices which he held he received as the nominee of that party. But he was not a bitter partisan; and whenever he has been a candidate for office he has never failed to receive votes from among the most intelligent and respectable of his opponents.

In 1854 Judge Beakes married in this city Miss Sarah Swathel, who with one daughter, an only child, survives him.

His death will be most keenly felt in his stricken household, but by the Bar of which he was the acknowledged head, by the party which delighted to honor him, by all out citizens familiar with his gentle manner and pleasing countenance, his place will long be recognized as vacant—a place not easily made nor easily filled.

CIRCUIT COURT.

Hon. C. Joslin, Presiding.

Monday, May 15. People vs. S. D. Bycraft, charged with assault with intent to murder Miss Fannie Hobson.—The parents of these young people are neighbors on West Huron Street, and the prisoner aged 20, sought and enjoyed the company of Miss Hobson at entertainments and on pleasure rides.—Matters ran along thus until Sheldon Granger appeared as suitor for her company, to which Bycraft objected. Several missives passed to and fro, the tenor of which indicated deep passion for the young lady, and which if ever reciprocated, had become very cool. Passion worked itself into vengeance, and as alleged, into a murderous attack upon her life. The following jurors were accepted: John Schaff, Ann Arbor; C. Cooper, Dexter; Wm. D. Allen, Sharon; Nelson Eastwood, Ann Arbor; Edmund Clancy, Northfield; L. C. Wallington, Ypsilanti; Isaac Handy, Ann Arbor; Charles Schutes, Bridgewater; F. W. Cleveland, John C. Voorheis, Ypsilanti; W. H. Lowden, Augusta; Othniel E. Gooding, Jr., York. Prosecuting attorney Whitman for People; A. J. Sawyer for defense.

Henry Martin, a colored youth plead guilty to breaking into Goodspeed and Conklin's store in Ypsilanti, April 14, and was remanded for sentence.

From the Register.

L. Davis is engaged in reading the county history seriatim, and has got over about 700 pages up to the present time. Thus far he has marked about 1,500 errors, many of which are mistakes in spelling of proper names.

A dispatch from Judge Joslin Monday morning announced that illness would prevent his attendance at court which was accordingly adjourned until May 31. About 40 witnesses had been subpoenaed to be present this week when it was expected that the Arnold will case would be tried.

The trial of S. D. Bycraft for shooting Miss Fannie Hobson occupied the attention of the circuit court until Friday, A. J. Sawyer conducting the defense and Prosecuting Attorney Whitman the case for the people. Judge Joslin delivered the charge to the jury Friday and the latter were out all day, coming to an agreement shortly before 6 o'clock p. m. when their verdict was announced, Guilty of assault with intent to murder, with the recommendation to the mercy of the court. Young Bycraft listened to the announcement of the verdict in tears. His counsel was allowed until Monday to move for a new trial. Owing to the adjournment of court in consequence of Judge Joslin's illness, Bycraft will have to remain in jail until next week when the motion for a new trial will be heard.

TWENTY YEARS A SUFFERER.

R. V. Pierce M. D., Buffalo N. Y.: DEAR SIR—Twenty years ago I was shipwrecked on the Atlantic Ocean, and the cold and exposure caused a large abscess to form on each leg, which kept continually discharging. After spending hundreds of dollars, with no benefit, I tried your "Golded Medical Discovery" and now in less than three months after taking the first bottle, I am thankful to say I am completely cured, and for the first time in ten years can put my left heel to the ground. I am yours, WILLIAM RYDER, 87 Jefferson St., Buffalo N. Y.

Owing to the prevalence of easterly winds and the lateness of thu season, there is said to be more than three times the quantity of ice in the gulf of St. Lawrence which is usual at this time of year. The pack is reported to extend nearly the whole distance from Cape Breton island to Newfoundland, and to present a vast field of floes and bergs which would do honor to the Arctic ocean.

To Keep the Blood Pure

is the principal end of inventions and discoveries in medicine. To this object probably no one has contributed more signally than Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout N. MR. JOSEPH BEACH.

Stone in the Kidney Expelled after Using Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" About two Weeks.

One of the most remarkable cases that has ever been brought to the notice of the public is that of Mr. J. S. Beach, of Stone Bridge, Ulster Co. N. Y. Mr. Beach had suffered since Oct. 18th, 1874, from the presence of Calculus or Stone in the right Kidney. No less than seven physicians were employed at different times, to whom Mr. Beach paid hundreds of dollars for medical treatment, with only temporary relief for his agony.

By the urgent solicitations of his friends he was induced to try Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy"—experienced a marked improvement from the first day he began to use the medicine: on the 15 of September he voided a stone as large as could be passed through the natural channel.

Mr. Beach concludes a long letter to Dr. Kennedy by saying: "It will always afford me pleasure to recommend the "Favorite Remedy" to those who may be suffering from difficulties of the kidneys and bladder, or any disorders arising from an impure state of the blood. The "Favorite Remedy" sold by all druggists. The Doctor's only address is Rondout, New York. 947-4-w

Michigan need not yet trouble itself about the evils of landlordism. There are 154,008 farms in the State: Of these 68 are under 3 acres; 2,737, 3 and under 10 acres; 4,514, 10 and under 20; 45,092, 20 and under 50; 55,777,50 and under 100; 45,391, 100 and under 500; 408, 500 and under 1,000; 84, 1,000 and over. From this it will be seen that 108,125 farms in this State are under 100 acres in extent. There doesen't seem to be much call for a division of property as the Greenbackers of Ionia resolved a few years ago.—Lansing Republican.

Plain Talk from Dr. Swayne.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.—Itching Piles is one of the most annoying complaints known to physicians. Every one can tell whether he is thus afflicted by observing the following symptoms: Intense itching, particularly after getting warm. It seems as if pin worms were crawling in or about the rectum. Small lumps sometimes form. The private parts are often affected. The more you scratch the worse the itching. Knowing that my Ointment is superior to any in the market, I guarantee it to cure the worst case of Itching Piles in existence.

CONGRESS.

May 18.—In the house, the bill to restore to American citizenship such citizens as have been naturalized as subjects of Great Britain was passed; also certain amendments to the Crapo bill extending national bank charters, including that to place national banks on the same footing with state banks in the states. A bill was passed changing the boundaries of the Fourth Collection District of Virginia and making Newport News a port of entry.

In the senate the bill authorizing the exchange of U. S. solid coin for bars was passed. Mr. Cameron reported favorably from committee a bill appropriating $100,000 for a public building at La Crosse. Mr. Conger failing to secure immediate consideration of bills for public buildings, said he would urge action on them to morrow.

May 19.—In the Senate, the house bills for public buildings at the points named with the amount appropriated stated passed: Louisville, $500,000; Hannibal, $75,000; Detroit, $600,000; Council Bluffs, $100,000. The Senate bill appropriating $100,000 for a building at Lacrosse, Wis., was also passed. The Senate bills authorizing the Texas and St. Louis railway company to build bridges in Arkansas and to incorporate the Garfield memorial hospital were passed. The five per cent. land bill was taken up next. Pending amendments were considered, and new amendments proposed and adopted or rejected, and the bill finally passed, ayes 23, nays 17. The bill provides that lands entered by military scrip, or county land warranty in certain states—Michigan included—shall be construed to come within the law for the payment to states of 5 per centum of the proceeds of public lands disposed of within their borders, lands to be estimated at the rate of $1 25 per acre and payments to be made in cash. It is also provided that money remaining in the treasury to the credit of any public land in states under the act of 1836 which distributed the treasury surplus shall not be charged as an offset towards any part of the amount coming to the state from the bill.

The House resumed the consideration of the bill to extend bank charters. Amendments were proposed by Messrs. Buckner, Rice, Bland, Randall and Morrison, which were rejected or ruled out, and the bill passed, yeas, 125, nayes 67. A joint resolution was passed appropriating $16,000,000 to supply the deficiency in the appropriations for army pensions.

In the Senate, Mr. Miller introduced a joint resolution to authorize the President to declare martial law in Alaska. Referred. Mr. Hoar then addressed the Senate on the subject of the Geneva award question, being upon the House bill on the subject. He briefly stated that the bill makes provision for claims of the exculpated cruisers class and war premium men to the exclusion of the insurance companies. The Secretary of War asks a special appropriation of $25,000, not later than June 1, for the purpose of dispatching a vessel with men and supplies for the relief expedition last year sent to Lady Franklin Bay.

In the House, Mr. Calkins called up as a privileged question the contested election case of Mackey vs. Dibble. A call of the House was ordered, which disclosed the presence of 523 members. The doors were then closed and the Sergeant-at-Arms directed to take absent members into custody. No quorum being found, Mr. Calkins gave notice that he would bring up the election case to-morrow.

In the Senate, Mr. Logan reported from the Military Committee that a provision be inserted in the Army Appropriation bill for the establishment of an army and navy hospital at Hot Springs, Ark. Referred. The Senate proceeded with the bill for the distribution of the Geneva award. All the amendments were rejected and the bill passed as received from the House, yeas 38, nays 12.

In the House the struggle over the contested election case of Mackey vs. Dibble was resumed, but no quorum being found, the session for the evening was dispensed with, and the House adjourned.

May 24.—In the senate Mr. Logan reported favorably and asked immediate consideration of the House joint resolution appropriating $16,000,000 to supply the deficiency in the appropriation for army pensions for the current fiscal year. Passed. Under the order for the calendar the senate, yeas 24, nays 23, passed the senate bill for the relief of the officers and crew of the United States steamer Monitor, who participated in the action with the rebel ironclad Merrimac in March, 1862 The amount of the appropriation is stated at the actual value of the Merrimac at the date of the action, not exceeding $200,000.

In the house Mr. Calkins, rising to a question of personal privilege, sent to the clerk's desk and had read that portion of the letter written by Mr. Hewett to Mr. Manning, which charges that the committee on elections refused to investigate the charges of forgery preferred before that committee. Mr. Calkins stated that when these charges were made by a member of congress it was a reflection on every member of the committee. The committee had never failed to inquire into the truth of any charge before it. A long and noisy discussion arose as to the action of the committee, Mr. Atherton claiming it had refused to inquire into the charges of forgery, and Mr. Calkins denying the statement. The afternoon was spent in filibustering without a quorum, and members were notified to bring five days' rations to-morrow.

FOREIGN.

In the house of commons, May 19, debate on the repression bill was resumed. Mr. Gladstone denied that the bill was the outcome of English resentment. It was not founded on the Phœnix park disaster, but was contemplated long before the occurrence. He desired it passed unaltered in its main lines. Mr. Parnell also spoke. His remarks were most moderate.

The steamship Wisconsin, which arrived at New York on the 17th inst., sailed from Queenstown at 8 o'clock Sunday morning, May 1. Mrs. Sarah J. Van Buren, of 192 Franklin St., Buffalo, N. Y., whose portrait appears in another column of this paper, is preparing a "Ladies' Tonic" which has proved a blessing indeed to many a wornout wife or mother. The sensitiveness of woman's organization makes her more susceptible to disease than man, and there has been a long-felt want among ladies for something which would overcome those many weaknesses so common to the sex, and assist nature in building up a shattered constitution. This Mrs. Van Buren's "Ladies' Tonic" has never failed to do.

Duties of Health Officers.

The State Board of Health has issued a circular, setting forth the duties of health officers, which will be productive of good if due attention shall be paid to its suggestions by the township, village and city local boards.

If no health officer is appointed in a township "within thirty days after the annual township meeting," it will still be necessary to appoint or re-appoint one after that time, as in the case of a vacancy; as will also be necessary if the officer appointed does not "qualify," or file his oath of office. Before entering upon his duties the health officer should take and subscribe the official oath required by Sec. 1, Art. xviii., of the Constitution of this State, and file the same in the office of the clerk of the city, village, or township of which he is the health officer.

The health officer should attend to the following directions: (1) Epidemics should be prevented. This can generally be done, if local boards of health will but act efficiently in studying out and applying methods which are now practicable. (2) Prompt notice of outbreaks of disease should be secured. For the most effective restriction of all communicable diseases one of the first requisites is that your board shall promptly receive notice of every case of a communicable disease. The law makes provision therefor. (3) Communicable diseases should be restricted. When notice or information of the occurrence of a case of a communicable disease reaches the local board, the board should act promptly for the restriction of the disease. To neglect or postpone such action is a great violation of public trust. The officer should promptly verify the reports of cases of scarlet fever, diphtheria, small-pox, or other dangerous disease, and investigate suspected cases which are not reported, so that he may act intelligently; secure the prompt and thorough isolation of those sick with or exposed to such a disease, and see that such isolation is continued as long as there is any danger of communicating the disease; see that no person suffers for lack of nurses, etc., because of isolation for the public good; give public notice of infected places, as required by section 1722, compiled laws of 1871; notify teachers or superintendents of schools concerning families in which are contagious diseases; regulate funerals of persons dead from scarlet fever, diphtheria, small-pox, etc.; disinfect rooms, clothing, and premises, and all articles likely to be infected, before allowing their use by other persons; give certificates of recovery and of freedom from liability to communicate the disease; keep his own board of health, and the State Board of Health, constantly informed respecting every outbreak of a disease dangerous to the public health.

(4) Nuisances should be abated. While it is not, as many suppose, the first and only duty of a health officer to smell out a cesspool or an offensive privy, he is the one to whom, from his official position and authority, the people properly look to discover and abate any such nuisance.

(5) Sanitary information should be disseminated among the people. The local board of health should be a center of sanitary and hygienic intelligence for its locality; its meetings should not be infrequent, and should be so managed as to secure papers or discussions on special subjects and on the application of the principles of sanitary science to the particular sources of danger in the immediate vicinity.

THE HOUSEHOLD.

Ventilating Dwelling Houses.

Mr. W. Mattieu Williams suggests in Knowledge that the problem of domestic ventilation might perhaps be solved by taking a lesson from the coal pits and extending the application of coal pit ventilation to modern tesidences. In a pit the fresh air descends by one shaft, passes through all the workings and escapes through the upcast shaft. In a house, says Mr. Williams, no downcast shaft is required, the pressure of the surrounding air taking its place. But the model house must have an upcast shaft, placed as nearly in the middle of the building as possible, and communicating with every room, either by a direct opening or through a lateral shaft. An ordinary chimney built in the usual manner is all that is required. There must be neither stoves nor fire-places in any room excepting the kitchen. All the windows must be made to fit closely, as nearly air-tight as possible. Outside of the house, or on the ground floor, on the north side, if possible, should be a chamber heated by flues, hot air, steam or water pipes, and with one opening communicating with the outer fresh air, and another on the opposite side connected by a suitable shaft or airway with the hall of the ground floor and the general staircase. Each room to have an opening at its upper part of the chimney, like an Arnott's ventilator, and capable of adjustment as regards area of aperture, and other openings of corresponding or excessive combined area leading from the hall or staircase to the lower part of the room. These should be covered with perforated zinc of wire gauze, so that the air may enter in a gentle, broken stream.

All the outer house doors must be double, i. e., with a porch or vestibule, and only one of each pair of doors opened at once. These should be well fitted, and the staircase airtight. The kitchen to communicate with the rest of the house by similar double doors, and the kitchen fire to communicate with the upcast shaft or chimney by as small a stove-pipe as practicable. The kitchen fire will thus start the upcast and commence the draught of air from the warm chamber through the house toward the several openings into the shaft. In cold weather, this upcast action will be greatly reinforced and maintained by the general warmth of all the air in the house, which itself will bodily become an upcast shaft immediately the inner temperature exceeds that of the air outside. But the upcast of warm air can only take place by the admission of fresh air through the heating chamber, thence to hall and staircase and through the rooms into the final shaft or chimney.

In summer, the kitchen fire would probably be insufficient to secure a sufficiently active upcast. To help this there should be in one of the upper rooms—say an attic—an opening into the chimney secured by a small well-fitting door, and altogether inclosed within the chimney a small automatic slow combustion stove or a large gas-burner. The heating chamber below must now be converted into a cooling chamber by an arrangement of wet cloths or by the use of ice, so that all the air entering the house shall be reduced in temperature.

Nothern Beef on Southern Tables.

The pleasing news has come North that on the bills of fare at some Southern hotels "Northern beef" is specified. If good beef reaches the hotels there is no reason why it should not also reach priva. tables in the South. Should it find its way to these the average physical and intellectual condition in the south will improve. The southener is naturally a very good fellow, but he rarely learns how to take care of himself, and as fat pork does not kill him at short notice he is too frequently willing to make it his only kind of meat, the results being greatly to his own detriment. There is no more hospitable fellow in the world than the southerner; any wayfarer who does not look like a political tramp is welcome to partake of his hog and hominy; but the trouble is that while the wayfarer is likely to get something better to eat in the course of time the native is not, and as a consequence he is sometimes very bilious, suspicious and bellicose. Rational food would do the south more good than her entire store of political platitudes, and the appearance of northern beef on southern tables is a pleasing promise of better things to come. That she may enjoy northern beef, take it into her true inwardness and be the better for it, will be the earnest wish of every man in the north, although not one in a hundred thousand has any interest in the beef business.—N. Y. Herald.

CHOPPED POTATOES.—Cut or chop cold Irish potatoes into bits about half an inch square. Heat some nice dripping in a frying-pan, salt and pepper it, and fry in this two or three slices of onion. Take these out and throw away. Put the potatoes into the hissing fat and turn often to prevent them from browning until they are very hot all through. Mix in with them now a teaspoonful of finely-minced parsley, stir and toss it into the potatoes for two minutes and dish. There should be just enough fat to cook the potatoes, but not enough to make them greasy to dripping when you take them out. Serve very hot. This dish is known on hotel bills-of-fare as "Lyonnaise Potatoes," (pronounced "Leeonnaise,") and is a general favorite, although seldom really well-cooked. Sometimes the onion is minced and stirred in with the potatoes while the latter are cooking, a ranker and a coarser preparation of the materials than that which I have given. The common fault is to make the whole too greasy, a defect rendered more glaring by the lukewarm temperature of the mass by the time the guest gets it. See to it, then, that John gets his "Lyonnaise" dry, hot and savory.

LEARN ABOUT THE PULSE.—Every person should know how to ascertain the state of the pulse in health; then, by comparing it when he is ailing, he may have some idea of the urgency of his case. Parents should know the health pulse of each child, as now and then a person is born with a peculiarly slow or fast pulse, and the very case in hand may be of that peculiarity. An infant's pulse is 140; a child of 7 about 80, and from 20 to 60 years is 70 beats a minute; declining to 60 at four-score. A healthy grown person's pulse beats 70 times a minute. There may be good health down to 60, but if the pulse always exceeds 70 there is a disease, the machine is working itself out; there is a fever or inflammation somewhere, and the body is feeding on itself; as in consumption, when the pulse is quick, that is over 70, gradually increasing, with decreased chances of cure, until it reaches 110 to 120, when death comes before many days. When the pulse is over 70 for months, and there is a slight cough, the lungs are affected. There are, however, peculiar constitutions in which the pulse may be over 70 in health.

How to Manage the Mississippi.

The distinguished German engineer and traveller, named Chevalier Ernst Von Hesse Wartegg, has been making extraordinary suggestions about the Mississippi river inundations. He says that levees on the Mississippi river will be money thrown away, and that the $100,000,000 already spent in that way has been totally ineffective. He says the way to make the Mississippi behave is to help it in the effort it is making to shorten itself toward the Gulf. In 1721 the distance from Cairo to New Orleans was 1,215 miles, and to-day it is 240 miles less than that, or only 974 miles. He says Red River ought to be drawn off from the Mississippi, and allowed to run to the gulf through the Calcasieu river, which would be only 80 miles instead of 500 miles it has to pass through to the Mississippi. Both the Ohio and the Red river are a barrier to the rapid current of the Mississippi. The Wachita ought to be connected with the Atchafalaya, and let off to the Gulf that way, instead of embarrassing the Mississippi. The Mississippi itself ought to be connected with Lake Borgne, as proposed by Captain Cowden, which would draw off one-tenth of the whole body of water. He says that the River Po, in Italy, which has magnificent levees, is regularly inundated, and that the tendency of these levees is to raise the bed of the river by depositions in it; so that the Po, the Mississippi and many other streams with artificial banks really run on a high ridge of land, from which they inevitably overflow the surrounding country. He says levees from Cairo to New Orleans would cost $100,000,000, and would meet with the same fate as the others, and that artificial means cannot keep the tremendous river within bounds, and the only way to do it is to aid nature to find the straightest way to the gulf.

LIEUT. DANENHOWER.—Lieut. John W. Danenhower, the hero of the Jeannette expedition who is expected to arrive in this country about June 1, was born in Chicago, September 30, 1849. In the year 1866, he entered the naval academy at Annapolis, and graduated in 1870. Soon after he went to Europe and South America. He was on the Vandalia in the Mediterranean with Gen. Grant on his trip around the world who was favorably impressed with his knowledge of navigation and skill as an officer, and when he learned that Mr. Bennett was equipping the Jeannette for an arctic expedition he solicited him to engage the services of Danenhower, recommending him in the highest terms. Through the intervention of friends, he was detached and ordered to report for duty on the expedition then being fitted out. This was in July, 1878, and his first duty was to bring the Jeannette from Havre, France, to San Francisco. The time between his arrival at San Francisco and the departure of the Jeannette from the navy yard at Mare Island, on July 8, 1879, for the arctic regions, was consumed in preparations. Struck about a year after the vessel left San Francisco with an affection of the left eye, by which the right one was sympathetically affected, he was confined to his darkened berth for a period of six months, during which time he underwent 13 operations, and for a year, until the time of the disaster, indeed, he was declared by the doctor as incapacitated for duty, and was thereby deprived of any active share in the labors in the Arctic. Though deprived of his legitimate command, which was intrusted by Capt. DeLong before leaving the vessel to Engineer Melville, he was permitted temporarily to assume the command of the boat during the severe gale that separated the three boats when so near the Lena's mouth, and all the men saved with him join in the assurance that without him they must inevitably have perished.

A Lesson for Husbands.

"Well, now, this is what I call living," said Frank Elwyn. "Better than boarding, isn't it, Belle?"

"A great deal better, I think," says Belle, smiling.

"Yes, I should say so!" And Mr Fra k settled his manly proportions back in his chair, and elevated his feet man-fashion, on Belle's new piano-stool, regardless of the pretty rose-tidy which had cost her soft fingers so many hours' labor.

Married a year ago, they had been boarding at a stylish house ever since, and were now only a few days settled in a cosy home of their own. They sat in the prettiest little parlor imaginable, with flower-stands in the windows and pretty graceful nick-nacks scattered around, and the lamp burning under its transparent shade with a mellow light. Belle had a natural genius for housekeeping—all true women have a little of it—and it was her daily deiight to go through her small establishment and put everything in the dantiest order, without spot or speck. One thing troubled her orderly soul—that was Frank's propensity for leaving things lying about just anywhere, in a careless fashion not at all pleasing to her. He had a habit of tucking his slippers under the parlor sofa, so as to have 'em handy, and in vain Belle cautioned him to put them in the sitting-room closet. In vain she worked an elegant slipper-case of green merino. Frank admired it, thanked her with a careless kiss, and still kicked his slippers under the parlor sofa.

One day Belle carried them up-stairs. Then Frank gave vent to a subdued growl. "I'd like to have things left where I leave 'em, Belle!"

"And I'd like to have them put away, once in a while!" retorted Belle, spicily.

"No use to lug 'em off to the other room. Leave 'em here, and have 'em handy," grumbled Frank.

"But Frank," insisted Belle, "I don't want to get the name of an untidy housekeeper, just to humor you in an unreasonable whim."

"Nonsense! A fellow likes his own way now and then!"

Belle opened her mouth to say "So does a woman!" then resolutely shut it again, She was determined not to scold; but she was also resolved to cure Frank of his bad habit. Woman's wit, having a will, generally manages to find a way, and a man's wisdom may as well surrender when she says, "I shall!' as Master Frank soon found out. Next morning he kicked the slippers under the sofa, and said, "Now, Belle, let 'em be, so they'll be handy when I come home."

"But. Frank," says Belle, making one last attempt to carry the field openly, "Why not put them in their proper place?"

"Too much trouble! A man's home isn't home unless he can do as he pleases."

"But they don't look nice. They spoil the looks of the room, Frank."

"Yes they do; no they don't," says Mr. Frank, mixing up his answer with a man's usual clearness. "You just let 'em be, Belle. A thing looks as well in one place as another!"

"Is that your rule?" asked Belle, demurely.

"Yes, certainly," said Frank, preparing to go. And if he had been as sharp as he might have been, he would have noticed a twinkle of mischief in Belle's bright eyes as he kissed her good-bye.

But he went off to his work, and Madam Belle went to hers! If the field couldn't be carreed by open warfare, it should be by stratagem said General Belle! Frank was expecting to bring a friend home to dinner that day. It was Mr. Halford's first visit, and Belle wanted everything to be the tip-top of neatness. She still meant to have her dinner as perfect as could be, but she also meant to give Mr. Frank a complete lesson. She made the pretty parlor tidy, arranged everything in the nicest order, and then—she pulled the obnoxious slippers out into still plainer view, brought an arm-load of things from up-stairs, and proceeded to fling a hat on one chair, a sacque on another, a dress over a third, Frank's overcoat and a skirt of her own on the sofa, and two or three vests and shawls on the piano, while just in front of Frank's easy chair she tumbled a half-worn pair of boots. The effect can be better imagined than described. Mrs. Belle surveyed it a moment, then with a hearty laugh left it for Frank to inspect.

When they came in to dinner, Belle met them in the hall, greeted Mr. Halford cordially, and gracefully led the way to the parlor. The horrified expression of Frank's face when he saw the room, was almost to much for Belle's gravity; but she cooly tossed the things from a chair and offered it to their guest, seating herself upon the sofa on Frank's overcoat. In vain did Frank, by sundry expressive glances and restless manœuvres endeavor to attract Belle's attention. That provoking little matron remained obdurately insensible to all his telegraphing, and presently excused herself to see about the dinner, with-out a lock toward him, or a remark regarding the disordered room. When she came back to announce dinner she could hardly help screaming with laughter to see that chairs, sofa and piano were cleared—not a garment to be seen anywhere! When the dinner which was a delightful success, was over, and Frank and Mr. Halford were gone, Belle instituted a search for the property, and found it most ingloriously tucked into a closet under the stairs.

"It's a poor rule that won't work both ways, Mr. Frank!" she remarked. Frank found his slippers under the sofa, when he come home to supper, and Belle fancied he looked a little sheepish as he drew them forth.

"Well, did you enjoy Mr. Halford's visit?" she asked with a smiling face of angelic (and provoking) innocence.

"Why—ah—yes, pretty well! But I didn't exactly like the order of things Belle!"

"What was out of order?" Wasn't the dinner nice?" cooly asked Belle.

"The dinner was capital. I didn't mean that."

"Well, what did you mean?"

"Why, Belle, this horrible looking room!"

,'What was wrong with the room, Frank!" very calmly.

"Oh, nothing if it didn't strike you. Only I don't fancy a parlor being used for a closet, that's all!" in an injured tone.

"You don't!" exclaimed Belle, as if in surprise. "Why, I'm sure you said only this morning, that a thing looked as well in one place as another, didn't you? I was only following your own rule. Frank's color rose, He looked at Belle for a moment as if he did not know what to think. Then he broke into a laugh. "Sold completely!" he cried. "Come, Belle, I'll give in! You've beat me. You keep the other traps out of the way, and I'll put my slippers in the case hereafter."

"It's a bargain! I'll stick to it as long as you do," declared Belle, with a laugh.

"Done! I'll behave better in future. But I'll have to tell Halford the joke, Belle, for I know he thought queer things of this room.

"Well bring him again and he'll find it looking better," said Belle. Thereafter the little parlor did look better, for Frank remembered his lesson, and the offending slippers troubled Belle's orderly soul no more.

Surgery Aiding Music.

Piano players have always experienced trouble in obtaining a free movement of the third or "ring" finger. To become a proficient performer on the instrument, it is necessary to have free use of this member, and to attain this end one must practice for years. A Philadelphia music-teacher recently induced a mulatto in his employ—a performer of some brilliancy on the piano—to undergo a surgical operation designed to overcome this difficulty. The arrangement of the tendons of the third finger differs materially from that of the others. The upper or extensor tendon is connected on each side with the tendons of the second and the little finger by two smaller or accessory tendons. This acts like a martingale, and holds the finger down so completely that nothing but constant strain will loosen the pressure. Dr. William S. Forbes, professor of anatomy at the Jefferson Medical College, made two small openings in the back of the left hand and on each side of the extensor tendon, and divided the accessory tendon on each side. The finger was at once released, and immediately after the operation the young man was able to raise the finger and describe an arc of a circle one and one-half inches greater than he could before. The hand was perfectly well in a week, and the young man has the free use of all his fingers. So much more freedom has been given to the member by the operation that the other hand will be subjected to the same operation shortly.

London Truth:—"A young friend of mine was dining with his father a few nights ago. 'George,' said the fond parent when they next met, 'you took my overcoat instead of your own, and I regret to say I found the pockets of your coat full of cigarettes and matches.' I discovered my mistake, father, replied the son, 'directly I got outside, for I found the pockets of the coat I had on contained chocolate creams and three pairs of ladies' gloves.'"

THE NEW BLOOD PURIFIER
Resolvent

I will now state that I made a miraculous cure of one of the worst cases of skin disease known. The patient is a man forty years old; had suffered fifteen years. His eyes, scalp and nearly his whole body presented a frightful appearance. Had the attention of twelve different physicians, who prescribed the best remedies known to the profession, such as iodide potassium, arsenic, corrosive sublimate, sarsaparilla, etc. Had paid $500 for medical treatment with but little relief. I prevailed upon him to use the CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and the CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP external'y. He did so, and was completely cured. The skin on his head, face and many other parts of the body, which presented a most loathsome appearance, is now as soft and smooth as an infant's, with no scar or trace of the disease left behind. He has now been cured twelve months. Reported by
F. H. BROWN, Esq., Barnwell, S. C.

SCROFULA SORE.

Rev. Dr.——in detailing his experience with the CUTICURA REMEDIES, said that through Divine Providence one of his parishioners was cured of a scrofulous sore, which was slowly draining away his life, by the CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP externally. The poison that had fed the disease was completely driven out.

ECZEMA.

Sixteen months since an eruption broke out on my leg and both feet, which turned out to be Eczema, and caused me great pain and annoyance. I tried various remedies with no good results until I used the CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally and CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP externally, which entirely cured me so that my skin is as smooth and natural as ever.

CUTICURA.

THE CUTICURA TREATMENT, for the cure of Skin, Scalp and Blood Diseases, consists in the internal use of CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new blood purifier, and the external use of CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP, the great skin cures. Price of CUTICUIA, small boxes 50c,; largeboxes $1. CUTICURA RESOLVENT, $1. per bottle. CUTICURA SOAP, 25c.; CUTICURA SHAVING SOAP 15c.

ALL THE RAGE.—This summer as well as last,—fishing in a boat at the cold spring and refreshing ones self with a plunge bath and a rescue.

Ex-Justice Forsyth is resting up after an official career of 26 years, with the exception of the interim of a year, sometimes holding two or three offices at once.

At the 2nd. Baptist church on Sunday, at 7.30 P. M., the Rev. J. R. Alexander of A. M. E. Zion church will preach. Subject, "Syro-Phonician woman."

Unclaimed letters May 25th: Mrs. Mollie Callan; Chas. Cook; Mrs. Helen Finney; Hiram Fisk; Rickie Frick; Mrs. J. F. Martin; Mrs. Rebecca Mass (2) Nettie Phillips; Daniel Place; John W. Williams.

TORNADOES.—Sargeant Finley of the weather signal service has prepared a paper on tornadoes, with a view, possibly, to their abatement as nuisances. Kansas had been most afflicted, having had 62 since the state has been occupied by white people. Illinois has had 54 since a record has been kept; Missouri, 44; New York, 35; Georgia, 33; Iowa, 31; Ohio, 28; Indiana, 27; and many other states and territories one each. The storms usually occur between 5 and 6 in the evening, and the average width of the path of destruction is 1,080 feet. Sergeant Finley says that "a tornado cloud always has a center, and it always moves forward from west to east. It may, however, sway from side to side in its progressive movement. Changes in motion are sometimes very sudden. In the event of a sudden change the observer who is east or south of east of the storm should move quickly to the south. If he is northeast he should move to the north."—Lansing Republican.

YPSILANTI, MICH., May 6, 1882.

To the Editors of Every Saturday.

Your correspondent () in to day's issue, in the article upon Emerson, says: "Yet Carlyle and Mill in England and Emerson and Sumner in America played in some respects corresponding parts in the great break up in religion and politics, whose benefit in part we are now enjoying."

I understand that there has been something of a "break-up in politics," but pray tell us what particular "break-up" religion has met with. I supposed that, at least, stable, and not puffed about by "every wind of doctrine," even though the wind be blown by the names mentioned, with the tornado, Bob Ingersoll, thrown in.

If religion has had a smash-up, please tell us when it happened, and how.

Yours for "the old, old story,"

E. P. ALLEN.

Every Saturday confirms its statements by Congregational loseness of scripture doctrines as illustrated in the installation of Rev. Dr. Merriam at Sumerville, Mass. The congregationalists of New England 100 years ago slid off into Unitarianism. It looks as if history was about to repeat itself. But at the west they stand firm in the doctrines delivered to the Saints.

The Hon. Calvin Wheeler, who died Tuesday, had been a resident of the township of Salem, this county, since 1830. He located land on sections 10 and 11. He was married in New York in 1829 to Almira Smith. At the time of the Toledo war he raised a company of 50 men and was elected their captain. Mr. Wheeler was one of the first assessors of Salem township after its organization, and with the exception of constable held every office in the town. He was elected in 1851 to represent Washtenaw in the legislature. In 1872 he was appointed postmaster at Salem Station. For eight years he was agent for the Detroit, Lansing and Northern railroad at the same place. He leaves five children, George S., supervisor and merchant of Salem Station; Elizabeth, wife of the late Charles Ryder; Almira, wife of Hiram B. Thayer of Wayne county; Stephen C. and Daniel Webster, well to do farmers of Salem.—Post and Tribune.

NORMAL ITEMS.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Lafflin will return to school about June 1.

The debate last Friday evening was won by Messrs. McKinney, Hewitt, Meacham and Essery.

It is far better for students to err on the side of fun then on the side of too severe work.

A side walk on Normal street near Congress has caused two ladies quite severe injuries. There is no excuse for a man of means to allow such a nuisance.

The telescope is out every night, and Normal students whether for scientific purposes or not spend the evening gazing at the comet and the stars.

The girls of the Junior class have caught the spirit of the anti importation bill, and have refused to allow the gentlemen members of the class to invite outsiders to the class reception at Miss Jennie Ressler's next Saturday. The filibustering is in the interest of protection and against free trade.

We are anxiously awaiting the class hats of the Common schoolites, they are said to be very attractive.

Miss Myra Redfield was lately presented with two boquets by her geography class in the model. Miss R. is very much liked as a teacher.

The St. Cecilia club met Tuesday at the residence of Mr. Dodge for practice. The chorus is stronger then ever before.

We were pleased to see Miss MacVicar at the piano on Wednesday morning. The students all rejoice at her recovery from recent illness.

Miss Gay sent the class song to Prof. Pease, when he was in Europe, to be set to music. We shall expect something grand, something of old castles and cathedrals.

The Athenaeum society will celebrate Athenaeum day by a pic-nic in Starkweather's grove. A jolly good time is anticipated.

Professors Putnam, McLouth, and Lodeman, Hon. Edgar Rexford, and Mr. Willis Weeks were the Judges in the debate last Friday.

When the new building is completed, we wonder what use will be made of the tower, perhaps to confine unruly correspondents until they promise to do so no more.

Miss Mabel Robinson gave a reception to her Virgil class last week. Miss R. is very highly spoken of as a teacher.

We understand the Crescent will not join in a mass meeting to consider the feasability of changing the society work. We trust the Crescents will see they are hurting themselves in this stand.

The most interesting day of the term in the literature class was Wednesday when Webster was discussed. When the bell rung every member felt sorry.

PERSONALS.

Judge Joslin is getting better.

Rev. Mr. Gallagher of Adrian supplied the pulpit at St Lukes last Sunday, charminf the audience.

Prof. R. W. Putnam attended the Superintendents meeting at Lansing last week.

Rev. Dr. Fish filled the pulpit at the Baptist church last Sunday preaching two most excellent discourses.

Rev. Mr. Elwood was called to Mt. Clemens on Wednesdey to assist in laying the corner stone of the new church which the Methodist Society of that city is building.

By an inadvertance we neglected to mention last week the visit of Mr. James B. Woodford of Worcester, Mass., He was here to sell some real estate. He made us a visit Saturday, renewing his subscription for the COMMERCIAL.

At the last E. D. Lay, H. Benham and W. K. Brock were drawn into the meshes at Ann Arbor, we mean the jury list.

Mrs. John C. Smith and daughter of Middleville, Barry Co., have been visiting Mrs. Hiram Seaver, the past week.

Mrs. Chas. Coryell from Toronto, Ontario is visiting her parents Mr. Frank Smith, will remain several weeks.

Mrs. J. Z. Harrison and daughter Belle returned Thursday of last week from a five week's visit to South Chicago. Friday evening a number of young people gathered at the house to give them a welcome home. A merry time.

In a note from Dr. MacVicar he states that the college session closed May 3d. That he spent a pleasant winter at Toronto and enjoyed his work very much. The next session of the college will begin Oct. 5th. Meanwhile he will be in New York city until Aug. 1st.

Rev. J. Sunderland has accepted the call to the pastorate of the 1st Baptist church. To begin his labors June 1st. We welcome him to plenty of hard work and a field of usefulness. Satan has no higher seat here as we are aware, than elsewhere, but high enough to demand unremitting attention.

R. H. Crane, Orleans, Neb., is visiting his mother Mrs. C. A. Lamb. Mr. Crane is now perfectly blind, having been thus afflicted for nearly a year, Cause, inflamation. Mr. Crane will be remembered by some of the older citizens, being at one time pastor of the Dixboro M. E. Church and later located at Dexter.

As Mrs. H. R. Hill of this city and Mrs. Wm. H. Lewis of Ypsilanti were passing the St. James yesterday, a bucket of paint fell off the scaffolding on which the painters were working, and bedaubed the dresses of these ladies.—Democrat.

Ypsilanti painters are better behaved.

SAFE HOME.—Prof. Pease arrived from his European visit safe and sound Friday morning. He came over on the National Steamer Italy. The vessel was hemmed in by the ice for a day or so, but otherwise was not delayed or damaged. There were nearly 1,300 passengers on board and they had a pleasant time. He was warmly welcomed at his home by a host of friends, fellow teachers and pupils. As he has a furlough for the year he will not resume his position in the Normal until next term.

We cheerfully give place to the following from the Birmingham Ecentric of May 18, 1882:

Andrew Ebling formerly of Big Beaver made us a pleasant call this week. He has finally settled down to the dry goods trade in Ypsilanti. Mr. Ebling has a very large acquaintance in this vicinity, having been in business at Big Beaver since 1852. For the past 25 years he has filled the pulpit at that place, occupied the position of post-master for nearly as many years, and has by vigorous, manly and honorable dealing made a snug fortune. He has associated himself in the exclusive dry goods trade with Mr. E. Comstock, one of Ypsilanti's oldest business men and and most influential citizens. The new firm will have abundant capital, will employ five clerks, and Ypsilanti will be greatly benefited by this new and energetic house. Mr. Ebling's hosts of friends at Big Beaver and Birmingham will sincerely regret his departure from his old haunts, and he will no doubt miss the kindly faces and familiar greetings of his old friends, to whom he wishes to express his thanks for their favors of many years past, and hopes they will bestow upon his successor, Mr. Flinn, the same treatment which he has prospered under for so many years."

We are glad to welcome Mr. Ebling as a permanent resident of our city. We learn that he has bought the Stoddart place on Adams street, and will on the 1st of June engage in business with Mr. Comstock under the firm name of Comstock & Ebling successers to E. M. Comstock & Co. We wish success to the new firm.

Every one of the drinking customs of this land is a custom coming down to us from the pagan worship of devil gods.

Thousands of women bless the day on which Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" was made known to them. In all those derangements causing backache, dragging-down sensations, nervous and general debility, it is a sovereign remedy. Its soothing and healing properties render it of the utmost value to ladies suffering from "internal fever," congestion, inflamation, or ulceration. By druggists.

Secretary Chandler has ordered eighty clerks to be dropped from the rolls of the Navy Department. They were not needed, and hence this act is praiseworthy.

Rev. M. P. Remington, Ithaca, N. Y., writes: "From too close application to my calling my health underwent a severe strain. I felt a weakness in every part of my body. My digestion especially failed me, and my nerves became all unstrung. Recreation did not do me proper benefit. Finally, on the recommendation of a brother minister, I tried Brown's Iron Bitters. It has made me feel better and stronger than I ever before felt since I was a young man."

A man takes a glass of the nasty, dirty, bitter swill, known as beer, and gulps it down, and, as he rolls into the gutter debauched, and with his manhood soiled and tainted by contact with this heathen relic, he cries out, "Great is Gambrinus, the god of beer."

STOP AND CONSIDER.

Are you troubled with a weakness in any part of the body? Have you weak lungs, or is your heart's action enfeebled and irregular? Are you suffering from ill health, caused by weakness of the urinary or digestive organs? Remember, Brown's Iron Bitters will cure you and fully restore both mind and body to their normal condition. It quickly restores the parts affected.

THE FARMERS AND THE RAILROADS.

The overshadowing problem of the future is the issue between the railroads and the people, between the thrifty producers and corporate monopolies.

Eighteen years have elapsed since Abraham Lincoln struck the shackles of slavery from the limbs of four million bondsmen by his edict of emancipation. The issues that divided the country since the rebellion of 1861 have all been settled by constitutional amendments and laws enacted by congress. The decree has gone forth that this is a nation and not a mere confederacy of states. Resumption is an accomplished fact. A paper dollar is as good as a gold dollar. The national credit is on a sound basis, and all financial experimenting is at an end.

Shall corporation kings rule free America? Shall railway monopolies dictate the laws made by our national and state legislatures and interpret them through venal judges of their own choice? Shall the giant corporations that control all the public highways over which American produce must go to market, fix arbitrary and extortionate tolls upon transportation and thus reduce the toiling millions of America to mere serfs and dependents? or shall the people who gave vitality to these corporation by granting them charters, who have built the great transcontinental roads with princely subsidy in lands and bonds, exercise their power, pass laws for their self-protection, and say to these arrogant monopolies, thus far you can go and no farther!

The consolidation of mammoth corporations during the past twelve month has seriously alarmed the whole country. Six men in California, who twelve years ago on the aggregate did not own over $150,000, now control the entire system of railroads on the Pacific slope, bonded and stocked for $187,000,000. Jay Gould, who fifteen years ago was almost bankrupt, to-day controls over eleven thousand miles of railroad bonded and stocked for three hundred and fifty millions. The American railway monarchs wield greater power and exercise it more arbitrarily than any King or Emperor in all Europe. If this power goes unchecked another decade the great body of American people will be reduced to abject vassalage, and their government instead of being for the people, by the people, will be for the monopolis by the corporation kings. The salvation of this country is with the farmers. The merchants and manufacturers are completely at the mercy of the railroad managers, who can ruin them by discrimination. The farmers of America are comparatively independent and above all numerous enough to protect themselves and erect a perpetual barrier to the encroachment of corporate monopoliee. It is gratifying that the farmers all over the land are already wide awake and rallying for mutual protection. They are organizing for the irrepressible conflict and in the end are sure of victory—Omaha Bee.

Those Terrible Headaches.

I used "Favorite Remedy" for those severe Sick headaches I spoke about, and it has entirely cured me. You may use my name, if you choose, among those who so freely testify to the value of your medicine. I owe the restoration of my wonted good health to "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy." Sarah J. Woodruff, Newburgh, N. Y. The above is one of many letters of the kind received by Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y. 949-2w

Just think of it Warren Co. poured out 1000 barrels of oil Friday. The business at Oil city last Saturday covered 60,000 barrels. Oil is cheaper than wood or coal.

WHY

Will you grow prematurely old? From year's experience, Dr. J. L. Palmer is prepared to say that the regular and judicious use of his FAVORITE PRESCRIPTION prevents Premature Old Age by its influence over Herreditary or Constitutional diseases. It is valuable treatment for Rheumatism, either Chronic or Acute, Asthma, Sciatica, Tumors, either external or internal, Ulcers, Cancers, and all diseases having their origen in herreditary or constitutional causes. His prescription does not preclude internal remedies as it is externally administered under ALL circumstances. It is rapidly taken up by the absorbents and deposited in the veins, when it is attracted to the heart and conveyed to every part of the system, invigorating every nerve and land for new action.
